Now as law breaks down private organizations set up their own law, as the unions are doing in cities like Seattle and Portland; I called at once on General Grant, and it is rare that any group dares to oppose them. The revolt ered so pressing as to preclude of the Hubbard farmers was so unique it made front pages my remaining in Washington till Friday morning.

The resort to force in self-defense is not the solution to was fixed for the 23d and 24th the general problem, though it did give a quick answer in the single case. The agencies of the law must reassert themselves. Private bands must disperse in favor of legally constituted authority; and civil rights must be respected. Labor might fight for its aims within the orbit of the law. For if law fails the laborer is bound to suffer as much as anyone else.

Dissension in German Leadership

Behind the wall of tight censorship in Germany facts the surrender of the Confederates trickle through which reveal unrest in the high command. At under Kirby Smith." root there is the old feud between the army and the civil administrators, between the generals and the party leaders. The But he met it like the true solnazi leaders have been driving toward a new conception of dier he was, and at once started the state, Hitler's blood and soil, which elevates the state and to New Orleans. Before reaching glorifies the race and the culture at the expense of the individ- there, he received word of the ual. Patriotism is exalted into a form of mystical religion, which demands that faiths of organized churches be subordinate to the new creed.

The army leaders are more practical. For one thing they are satisfied with Christianity as religion. Perhaps they see the necessity for internal solidarity to support the army in the face of external enemies. At any rate they are reported to have forced the resignation of War Minister Von Blomberg, 1886. and to be insisting on cessation of the nazi program for crushing the Christian church. Hitler has now taken over the post himself, much after the manner of Mussolini who holds a handful of offices.

The leader in the army revolt is Col. Werner von Fritsch, chief of the general staff. In view of what has happened before to those who threaten der Fuchrer's power he is a bold man to face Hitler. But with the army behind him, even Hitler must stop and listen.

Inevitably oligarchs fall out; and dictators face dissension among their subordinates. Some are ambitious for power; others oppose party programs. The materials for collision abound everywhere. Stalin, facing internal difficulties, met the situation by a purge, the primitive response of the imperilled dictator. Hitler, it seems would need to act the same way, or else share his power with others, a confession of weakness no one who assumes the role of All-Highest cares to make.

At this distance it is impossible to say what the outcome he left that station late in 1867 e palace quarrel will be; but the situation bears watching. with an unsullied record for hon-
