Dancers to Appear in Eugene Friday

One of the foremost schools of modern dance will be demonstrated in Eugene Friday night when Doris Humphrey and Charles Weidman appear with their supporting group of dancers in Geringer hall on the university campus.

The group is appearing as a feature of a two-day dance symposium, which will be attended by girls and instructors from schools all over the northwest. Known wherever modern dance is known, Humphrey and Weidman and their group are outstanding exponents of a new and radically different style of dance presentation. They are recognized as leaders in their field, having appeared in many well-known productions in the east, such as "Americans" at the University of Chicago and "The Rite of Spring" at the University of California.

Style-Smiles - - - by Gretchen

"Another thing, mother—I think it's about time you recognized me as an equal!" With her correct, though mused, little jumper over a puffed sleeve, dotted with blouse, she's already mother's style equal, in juvenile form. The charm of the school day uniform is recalled in mother's crepe dress of Daytona blue. Tiny linen covered buttons file down a tab that extends beyond her pink linen vest. The short sleeves end in cuffs, too.—Copyright, 1938, Esquire Features, Inc.

Dinner Party Tuesday at Kuhn Home

A lovely affair of Tuesday night was the dinner party for which Mayor and Mrs. V. E. Kuhn and Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Gueffroy were hosts at the Kuhn home. The table was centered with a spring bouquet of daffodils and daphne and matching tapers.

Three Cookies for Afternoon Teas Are Simple

Cookies to be dainty and attractive need not be at all expensive. Sugar cookies, cut in tiny shapes and decorated with colored sugar or caraway comfits will provide dainty sweetness without too much richness. Here is an old fashioned sugar cookie to make in tiny forms and serve at your dearest tea.

In the Valley Social Realm

DALLAS—Mrs. H. D. Peterson entertained with a delightful affair at her home Monday night honoring Mrs. Theodore Coon of Vernonia. During the evening a miscellaneous shower was given for Mrs. Coon. A social time was enjoyed with a supper hour following. The serving table was attractive with an arrangement of rose hyacinths guarded by tall white tapers.

All Meats Should Be Cooked by Slow Heat

This department has for several years stressed the importance of cooking roasts at a low temperature to preserve the maximum amount of flavor and to assure the least amount of shrinkage. Low temperature is the most important single factor in successful meat cooking for it means less shrinkage, more attractive appearance, evenness of cooking, and more tenderness and moisture. These are advantages certainly which cannot be overlooked by any housewife, for often the meat dish is the center of the meal and its success or failure may spell the difference between a dinner which is enjoyed and one which is merely accepted. For roasting, a constant oven temperature of 300-350 degrees has been found to give best results. The time was when a roast must be seared in a hot oven until crusted and browned, but this practice was modified when it was learned that searing does not seal in the juices. Now the constant low temperature is favored. Usually it produces a roast which is sufficiently browned, but if not, the temperature may be increased for a few minutes at the end of the cooking period.

Meats Simmered, Not Boiled

For pot-roasts, stews, and any meats cooked in water, the same rule for low temperature in cooking holds true. The meat will be more tender and juicy if the water is never allowed to boil. A simmering temperature, the temperature at which small bubbles form underneath the surface, but never reach the surface, is the best for meats cooked in water. As the French cooks say, "The water should smile, not laugh." Even broiling nowadays is carried on at a much lower temperature than formerly, because we have found that quick broiling and almost charring is neither necessary nor desirable. A steak is better if broiled more slowly, and particularly so, the thick steaks which are the ones which give rise to epicurean delight. The temperature of broiling is governed by placing the steaks at least three inches from the source of heat. If the distance must be less, the temperature should be reduced accordingly.

Serve Clam Chowder With Tomatoes

Some time ago in several Seattle restaurants, the management offered both clam chowder with milk, and clam chowder with tomato. The latter type was found to be far more popular than the milk variety. This is typically a western version of chowder.

PUGET SOUND CLAM CHOWDER

(Makes 2 quarts) 2 pounds salt neck clams 1/2 medium onion 1 small green pepper 2 stalks celery 1/2 cup flour 2 cups canned tomatoes 2 small potatoes Wash clams, steam in water until shells open. Strain nectar from clams, remove clam meat from shells. Fry finely diced pork or bacon in pan, add onions, pepper and celery that have been finely diced, add flour, stir, then add tomatoes, nectar from clams, season with salt, pepper cayenne and a pinch of thyme. Dice potatoes in small cubes boil until tender in soup, add clams and a little chopped parsley and allow to heat through. If desired, milk may be added just before serving.

Bread Crumbs Make Good Hotcakes

Breadcrumb hotcakes are a request from a reader. Roll stale bread into coarse crumbs, set one cup to soak overnight or for several hours, in 2 cups milk. In the morning add a pinch of salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder, one well beaten egg, and enough flour to make a soft batter. Fry in small cakes on a greased griddle.

Prunes in Pie for Family Treat

Prunes are stewed to make an attractive appearing and nice flavored pie for family use. It's nice enough for company too, and will cut down the high cost of desserts.

PRUNE PUFF PIE

Cook a pound of dried prunes and when done run them through a sieve or colander. Beat three egg yolks and fold in the pulp, put in the saucepan and stir over the fire until yolks are set. Cool and fold in the three whites. Sweeten some if desired. Put in pan lined with pastry and bake for 30 minutes.

Don't Neglect Your Child's Cold

Don't let chest colds or croupy coughs go untreated. Rub Children's Mucous on child's throat and chest at once. This milder form of regular Mucostrole penetrates, warms, and stimulates local circulation. Floods the bronchial tubes with its soothing, relieving vapors. Mucostrole brings relief naturally because it's a "membrane irritant"—NOT just a saline. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Three strengths: Regular, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong.
