The preparation for the opera "Tolanthe" being presented two nights in Salem high school, March 25 and 26 is under way and two casts have been chosen to sing it. The story of the opera is mythical, with the characters half mortal and, half fairy and the music is said to be some of the most tuneful of the compositions of Sir Arthur Sullivan.

"The trouble is, when you build a house the architect always tries to incorporate some of his own ideas!" That must explain it-because you don't find such harmony in this field as exists between designers of clothes and their eventual owners. Take the above models; they're created by leading houses and suit us to a T. The little wool suit on the left is deep beige-almost butterscotch in shade, a heavenly blend with brown accessories and, as above, with a brown and white checked blouse. Right, a bolero-slashed up front, buttoned down back, all edges scalloped-tops a smooth black silk frock. Shocked into color with vivid scarlet silk at the throat-and 'round the wrists.
