

Comedy Pictures and Drama Are Offered at Theatres This Week

Elsinore Film Has Six Stars

"Gold Is Where You Find It" Also Remarkable for Technicolor

Most pictures which come to the local theatres boast two or maybe three stars at the head of their casts, but today's feature at the Elsinore is "Gold Is Where You Find It" which has gone overboard with a roster which includes six outstanding players.

A Warner Bros.-Cosmopolitan production in lifelike Technicolor, "Gold Is Where You Find It" co-stars Olivia de Havilland and George Brent in the romantic leads. As if this were not enough, they are supported by such outstanding actors as Claude Rains, John Littel, Margaret Lindsay, Barton MacLane, Tim Holt (son of Jack Holt) and Marcia Ralston.

Adapted from Best-Seller The story is an adaptation from Clements Ripley's best selling novel by the same name which ran serially in Cosmopolitan magazine. An outdoor drama of gold in California, it tells of the famous feud between the hydraulic miners and wheat ranchers which threatened to change the course of the state's history.

Said by reviewers to be one of the most beautiful and realistic Technicolor pictures ever produced, its scope required a cast of unusual talent. Claude Rains, of "They Won't Forget" fame, plays the part of the leading rancher and father of Olivia. George Brent is a mining engineer who in a large measure is responsible for ending the war between ranchers and miners.

Capitol Offering Mystery Thriller

'Midnight Intruder' Filmed From Action Story of Channing Pollock

"Midnight Intruder," a Universal thriller with a mystery-laden plot, moves to the Capitol theatre today.

This picture, which was filmed from an original story by the famous author Channing Pollock and adapted for the screen by Lester Cole, is chosen for its ability to keep the audience in rapt suspense one minute, and make them rock with laughter the next.

BROADWAY NIGHTS

NEW YORK—That busy lady, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, has now entered the lists as a dramatic critic—in fact, as a critic of critics—and with such sound and sane remarks that numbers of theater-goers have been moved to applaud her. Mrs. Roosevelt's provocation was the New York presentation of "Save Me the Waltz" and its reception by the gentlemen who review plays for the New York public. There were a number of reasons why Broadway awaited "Save Me the Waltz" with keener expectation than most plays command. First, it was the work of Katharine Dayton, whose play last year, "First Lady," was remembered with joyous appreciation of wit, and a satire, most of it aimed directly at people in high places. Second, an other eminent satirist, George Kaufmann, was reported to have given Miss Dayton advice and suggestions, he was even said to have been her collaborator, a rumor vehemently denied by both. Third, "Save Me the Waltz" is a Max Gordon production and Mr. Gordon, whose "The Women" appears likely to run on forever, had been singularly absent from the Broadway scene. Anything that Mr. Gordon finally brought to town, it was felt, was bound to be worth while.

Sees It Twice "Save Me the Waltz" opened in Washington, where it was liked and where Mrs. Roosevelt was among the eminent who saw it. Not only had Mrs. Roosevelt only kind words for the new work by the author of "First Lady," but she went out of her way to attend "Save Me the Waltz" a second time at its Broadway premiere. She had a protegee in the cast, it was explained, but since the protegee appears for two minutes in one scene and speaks five lines in chorus with two other young ladies, one supposes that Mrs. Roosevelt did not sit through three long acts so she could clap one.

president of the United States, reading their words along with a million other readers, seized her own typewriter and rushed to the rescue of "Save Me the Waltz." What she said made a good deal of sense, too. She said she had seen the show twice. She said she wasn't a high-brow, just an ordinary person who liked to be entertained in the theater. She'd been to such shows as "Our Town" and had been stirred, but she'd been made unhappy, too. She had not been made by unhappy by "Save Me the Waltz." It was, to quote one of her adjectives directly, a "pleasant" evening. And she went on to say that the reason a great many people went to the theater was for pleasure, not for pain, and she really didn't understand why the play-reviewers didn't inform the public what a show was about and not merely what they thought of it.

Just Pleasant Ordinarily we don't like people who say, "I go to the theater to be entertained," but in this case we think we must string along with Mrs. Roosevelt. We went to "Save Me the Waltz" and had a pleasant evening and were glad we weren't being hectorated by garment workers or curried by murders or exhausted by thinking about our soul. Some other evening we might be in a murderous or soulful mood, as the critics seem to be every evening, but once in a while it is pleasant to find the theater just pleasant.

Go! We were about to forget Mrs. Roosevelt's main injunction! All right—"Save Me the Waltz" is about a little kingdom in Europe whose royal family has been exiled by a dictator. Most of the family dote on exile. The king loves cows and the princess loves bees and the prince loves his piano. But the queen can't rest easy on her piazza without thinking of the palace. So when opportunity comes to return to power—

Joe E. Brown Star at Grand

Cavern-Mouthed Comedian Really Funny Cast in Soda Jerker Role

There aren't many people as funny as Joe E. Brown can be when he puts his mind to it. And he really concentrates in his latest picture, Columbia's "Wide Open Faces," which started its local run at the Grand theatre yesterday.

As a soda jerker, Joe is a scream. As an amateur detective, he's just too good to be true. At the beginning of the picture, Joe is the "Maitre D'Squirt" (soda dispenser, to you) at the Willow Springs Drug Store. A notorious gangster in the person of Stanley Fields alights from a bus one day and asks Joe to drive him out to a deserted inn. Joe is just about to do so when G-len grab Fields.

The story of Fields' attempt to get to the old hotel breaks in all the newspapers of the nation, and soon gangsters, hoping to discover the loot they are positive Fields hid in the inn, descend on the small town from every section of the country. Joe, thinking they're just transients, directs them to the hotel, which has lately been taken over by Betty Martin, a young girl, who inherited the place, and her aunt.

Well, a large order of desperate gunmen, each intent on finding the same thing before anyone else does, is apt to bring some unusual, comical situations. Feeling responsible for the mess in which girl hotel-owner finds herself, Joe sets out to correct matters. Of course, for a time he only manages to tangle things more horribly until, toward the end of the picture he proves himself quite a hero.

"Snow White and Dwarfs" on Way

Famed Animated Fairy Tale Booked at Elsinore Opening April 7

Every ardent movie fan who likes to keep pace with the times will look forward expectantly to the opening performance of the RKO Radio's Technicolor picture "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," which comes on Thursday, April 7, to the Elsinore theatre.

This happens to be the first time that a Walt Disney animated film has stepped out of the picture class into full feature length! The story subject is chosen from the world-famous Grimms' folk tales, and concerns the feud between the wicked queen and Princess "Snow White," the sovereign's jealous beauty, causing the former to attempt her rival's death by poison.

On "Snow White's" side are the forest birds and animals, as well as the dwarfs of the Dismal Mine, and the beautiful "Snow White" and the seven dwarfs, each with his own personality and his own drama thrill and laughter-arousing episodes. The audience appeal of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is universal, designed to captivate the imagination of grownups and children alike.

Leona Gilgenbach Is Hurt in Crash

LEBANON — Leona Gilgenbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Gilgenbach, was severely injured in an auto accident on the Santiam highway last Sunday when the car in which she was riding with Jerome Lutz and Mrs. Sandra Hueber overturned and lodged against a tree. Lutz and Mrs. Hueber suffered from shock and bruises. Leona is making a very slow recovery.

Lebanon hospital reports Omar Davis, employe of J. M. Leever of Seio, undergoing major surgery following an accident on the Leever place; Dewey Wallace, paper mill employe, suffering from a fractured foot at the mill; Mary Lee Vaughn, appendectomy.

Mrs. Andrew Snyder, Henry Friday and Elder C. E. Bennett are reported as seriously ill.

Bob Burns and Martha Rave are supported by a large and talented cast in "Mountain Music," playing at the Hollywood theatre today.

Brown's Funniest Picture

Hollywood Starts 'Mountain Music'

Bob Burns and Relatives Caper in Hill Farce Dealing With Feud

They'll be comin' 'round the mountain—the whole troop of 'em—Fud, Snazzy, Hod, Squincey and all the rest of Bob Burns' famous relatives, in "Mountain Music," a story of love, feuds, shotgun weddings, corn pone and pot likker which opens today at the Hollywood theatre.

It's Burns' first starring picture, together with Martha Rave, with whom he has been teamed lately with astonishing success. "Cover Girl" Stars The love interest is maintained by John Howard as Terry Walker, the latter famous "magazine cover girl" for whom Paramount Pictures conducted a search unique in film history. Paramount talent executives had seen Miss Walker's portrait on the cover of a national magazine and asked Norman Rockwell, noted illustrator who made the portrait but who lost track of her, who the model was. Barclay gave the film folk Miss Walker's name and then the search for her began.

Vesper Service Is Planned at Trinity

Convicts of Utah Pen Go Domestic

Will Don Aprons as new Prison Canning Work Gets Under Way

SALT LAKE CITY, March 19. —(AP)—Convicts at Utah state penitentiary—none of whom could be classified as a "fatty waist"—are going domestic.

They're going to don aprons, get out paring knives and labor over steam tables.

The penitentiary is going into the canning business. Warden Owen Nebeker said today that a cannery would be constructed in the prison yard this spring. Fruit and vegetables for the canning will come from the penitentiary gardens.

The program has a double-barrelled objective, according to Nebeker: It will provide employment for restless felons and it will stock the prison larder with food for consumption during the winter months.

Most of the cannery will be built from parts of the old prison boiler factory. As materials already on hand will be used, cost of the cannery will be approximately $500, Nebeker estimates.

Twenty convicts, those most adept at pitting cherries, coring out tomatoes and unstringing string beans, will work in the cannery. When the plant is going full blast, 200 additional prisoners will be gathering and caring for crops in the prison garden.

"We hope to be able to can 20,000 gallons of fruit and vegetables," says Nebeker.

Under state statute, articles made in the prison cannot be sold to the public. But Nebeker has a plan if canning output exceeds prison appetites—he's going to try and drum up a little business with other penitentiaries where cans don't can.

Raising of Money Order Is Charged

DALLAS — A man giving the name of Dean E. Maxwell was arrested by Polk County Sheriff T. B. Hooker Saturday afternoon at Guy's Hardware store when he allegedly tried to pass a raised money order.

The order was issued at Tacoma, March 17, for an original sum of $148 and had been raised to $174.8. A call to Tacoma was made to verify the original sum. The right side of the check had been cut off to hide the maximum amount of the order. The man is being held in Polk county jail here.
