

Pea Weevil

War at Hand

Successful Dust Program Is Explained by Rieder, Assistant Agent

Pea weevil may be controlled by the use of dust mixtures containing three-fourths of one per cent of rotenone, announces Robert E. Rieder, assistant county agent.

The pea weevil will soon be found, as they make their appearance as soon as the first peas come into blossom, and it is important to have the plants dusted soon after the blossoms form, as the weevil begins laying eggs as soon as the new pods are formed.

Proper timing of dust applications is absolutely essential for satisfactory results, states Mr. Rieder. After the weevil lays its eggs on the pod it is too late for control measures and wormy peas will result.

The first application should be made when the peas come into bloom before any pods have set, says Mr. Rieder. Later applications will depend on weevil migrations that are likely to enter the planting after the first application has been made. The assistant county agent will be glad to make weevil counts for any grower who desires help in this connection, he states.

Hooded Dusters Best

Hooded dusters are recommended for most satisfactory results on large acreages. In some gardens a hand duster may be used with excellent results, and dusting should begin with blossoming and be repeated every week thereafter during the growing season.

A grower can make a simple insect net out of a wire hoop and flour sack mounted on a light handle. By sweeping a few times across the pea plants in bloom the number of weevil can be determined. Each weevil is capable of laying over a hundred eggs and so a small weevil population if unchecked, could cause a large number of wormy peas.

Rate Is Listed

Dusts applied to field peas should be used at the rate of 20-25 pounds per acre.

Sanitation measures reduce weevil infestations for succeeding years, according to Mr. Rieder.

All peas left on the field should be plowed under to a depth of 6 to 8 inches immediately after harvest.

Vines in home gardens should be pulled and destroyed as soon as the peas have passed the edible stage.

The assistant county agent announces that a new circular, No. 126, on "Pea Weevil Control in Oregon" is now available at the county agent's office.

C of C Will Hold Open House Soon

Formal opening of the newly remodeled quarters of the Salem chamber of commerce is scheduled for next Wednesday night, May 18, it was announced yesterday by Barkley E. Newman, president.

The program, which will be distinctly informal in character, is being jointly arranged by the chamber's entertainment committee headed by Harry W. Scott, and the Cherrians under direction of Tom Hill, King Bing. The Cherrians and the chamber of commerce board of directors will be on hand to welcome visitors.

The chamber is anxious that residents of all communities in the territory near Salem, as well as all Salem people, attend the opening and see what has been accomplished in improving the chamber's headquarters.

Marie Lee Rites Set Next Monday

SILVERTON—Funeral services for Mrs. Marie Lee, 46, who died Thursday morning, will be held next Monday at 2 p. m. from Trinity church, with interment in Evans Valley. Mrs. Lee was born December 13, 1892. Survivors include the widower, Thomas Lee, and a daughter, Mildred Lee.

Tom's Coming

Future Olympic diving champion? Well, hardy, but an entertaining polar bear anyway. The bear, named Caesar, is one of two diving bears at the zoological park near Quebec City, Canada.

Diamond Replica Display Is Today

Miller's Store Will Show Copies of 15 Stones Worth $8,000,000

Salem people will have an opportunity to see replicas of the 15 most famous diamonds in the world today and Saturday only when the representative of a national jewelry house presents the traveling display at Miller's main floor.

If the copies were originals the display would represent $8,000,000 in value.

The imitations are made of crystal and are exact reproductions of the more valuable originals in cut, color, size and even flaws.

Lichberg Gem Included

One of the largest and most famous is the Koh-i-noor or Lichberg diamond which, according to tradition, dates back to the beginning of the fourteenth century, or even 5000 years, as some persons believe. A huge diamond is mentioned in the early poems of India worn by the hero of Karna, a legendary person. Many gemologists believe this stone of legend is the Koh-i-noor. The East Indian trading company presented the diamond to Queen Victoria in 1850.

The largest known cut diamond in existence is the Great Mogul. Its weight is 279 carats. It is said to have been cut from a 793 carat stone which existed in India.

Sancy History Colorful

The Sancy is another diamond with a history more remarkable than its size though it has been prized by kings. The stone came to Europe from India five centuries ago. It was worn by Charles the Bold into his last battle. When he was killed the diamond was picked up by a Swiss soldier and sold for a florin to a clergyman. It was once removed from the stomach of a dead servant who had swallowed it to prevent its falling into the hands of highwaymen who waylaid and murdered the servant.

There are many others with equally interesting history: the Polar Star, the Pigott, the Orloff, which topped the scepter of the Russian czar and other jewels belonging to the collection of crowns and jewels of the Russian royal family before the revolution; the Nassak, and many other famous diamonds.

All replicas of these 15 of the most famous diamonds will be on display at Miller's starting today and continuing through Saturday.
