Picnic Simplified Means More Fun For Cook

Picnics don't mean a lot of fancy food any more, with crustless sandwiches, pink lemonade and chocolate cakes. We westerners are too outdoorsy for such refined fare, but we must have our green onions and celery. salads, if sandwiches at all they will be of a husky filling variety, dessert may include cake but there will be some fresh strawberries along with it.

Most housewives no longer stand over a hot stove in the house to prepare for the family's good time. Most of them consider that if stand over a stove they must, it's going to be in a community kitchen out in one of the many beautiful parks, with fresh mountain air to inspire contentment. It's a lot more fun coaxing an outdoors stove into action than being all cool and collected at home.

So pack up the chicken raw, put in a paper bag of flour in which you shake the chicken to coat it, bring along your biggest blackest skillet and prepare for a good time.
