Coddling Moths Spray Time Here

Adults Already Active and Some Egg Laying Is Reported

The first cover spray for the control of coddling moths should be applied as soon as possible now, according to an announcement being made by the county agent's office.

The adult moths have been active the last few evenings and some egg laying has taken place. Under ordinary conditions these eggs will hatch in from six to eight days, and the spray must be on the fruit before this happens or the worm will make a successful entrance.

The recommended spray, says Robert E. Rieder, assistant county agent and county horticulturist, is powdered lead arsenate used | 12; milliced 3. at the rate of three pounds to 100 gallons of water. Where the worms are not usually severe,

Gregory helps him escape. Gregory then takes the girl, Sabine, to his hotel to save her from police questioning. There he asks her the meaning of the coded telegram he found in a black notecase on the floor of the cafe room after the fight. While they are talking her odd little companion, calls Sabine on the telephone, telling her the coast is clear for her to return to him. Gregory tries to get Sabine to admit that the thugs who attacked the man (a Scotland Yard officer) were in her friend's employ. She warns him that it is sometimes dangerous to know too much. CHAPTER IV

"A threat, eh? Come, that's ungenerous, since you'd be in the Deauville police station at this moment if hadn't got you out of that café. More, it's rank ingratitude when I propose to keep you here all night to save you from arrest. Remember, the man who your friend's thugs tried to do in was an officer from Scotland Yard. When our special branch men operate on the continent they always keep in touch with the local police, so if he has escaped he will have made his report by now—given your description—and the auorities will be wanting you pretty

For a moment she was silent, then with a little sigh she sat down on the arm of a low chair. "I am so tired." she murmured, passing her hand across her eyes. "Perhaps you are right Monsieur, but it is ungallant that you should take advantage of

He smiled, one of those rare warm amiles which could at times make his grim face so attractive, and laid a hand on her shoulder.

"Don't worry, please," he said softly. "I hope we are going to see quite a lot of each other in the fucture, so the last thing I want is to make you think me a bore. I only want to help you. I'm sure it's best for you to stay here the night, though. You can have my bed and I'll shake down with some cushions and the eiderdown in the bathroom. We'll talk things over in the morn-

"A lot, t'ank you." She smiled and shut the door.

He shaved his lean face with quick sure strokes, brushed his tambled hair, slipped on his dressing gown, and then joined her in the bedroom.

Her svening dress and stockings of truckling to it.

Gregory grinned. He did not need to ask of the said softly. "All right then, I will do as you wish, but the consequences—they must be upon your own head."

As his eyes opened he stared at her in bewilderment, then the events of the few hours before flooded back to him and he sat up.

"I am so somy if I disturb you," she said, "but I have been awake a long time and I am hungry; also, I would like a bath."

"A lot, t'ank you." She smiled and shut the door.

"I am you.

Now that this little frolic is over, however, she will naturally wish to return to my care at the earliest possible moment. To facilitate that end I send under your name a complete outfit of her day clothes. Should she fail to rejoin me by noon I shall consider you lacking in appreciation of the courtesy I have extended to you and proceed to teach you a sharp lesson in good manners.

She nodded slowly, not doubting for an instant that he meant exactly what he said.

Gregory made a practice of never being called and usually slept late in the morning. But at half past eight the bathroom door opened and Sabine put her dark head round the corner.

As his eves opened he stared at locked. On opening it, he saw a note inside. It read:

Dear Mr. Sallust:

I trust that you have taken care of my little friend, Sabine. Some people in my position might find grounds for serious annoyance in her desertion of me, but at my age I can afford to be tolerant towards the escapades of young people. I only hope she was not disappointed in you.

Now that this little frolic is over, he will naturally wish to
