The cast included: Koons See, the fair; Mary Elizabeth Kelle Chang, the good; Cleve Bartlett, the wicked Mandarin; Dan Clark Property man; Morrill Cray Increase Beaver; Josie Acklin; Dr. Bruce Baxter was master of ceremonies during the afternoon. Rev. George Swift in the evening. The evening's 9 o'clock performance included a film showing scenes taken in China during the war. Dr. F. D. Although primarily interested in the sale of the product which she represents, Miss Edna May Smith, who spent Friday in Salem at the Capital drug store giving instruction on care of hair, told this writer a great many things about the subject. "If men and women would take as much care of the scalp between visits to the hair dresser, as they do skin, there would be more beautiful hair in the world and much less baldness, too," said Miss Smith. Daily brushing is an important part of the care of hair, and it should be done systematically every day. "Brush the hair, as many strokes as the arm will allow" is the rule of the Orlive sisters' system of scalp care, according to Miss Smith. The next day increase a stroke or two until the arm gains strength for a good many more daily strokes. Brush up and out. Other hints gleaned during the lunch hour with this attractive specialist are:

Hair Expert Talks on Care of Scalp

Brushing will alleviate all the abnormal conditions of the scalp including dandruff, greyness, and it aids rather than removes a wave either natural or acquired. Relax completely when having a hair treatment, it's almost as important as the massage and tonics themselves. Too much water is hard on the scalp, men should cover the hair during the daily shower. Brushing is a daily cleansing agent for both men and women. Diet has a great deal to do with healthy hair. Those with naturally curly hair are apt to give it less care than those with thin and less attractive waves.

Another dish that serves those ladies who are listed among the guests at numerous covered-dish, no-host or basket meals during the month. This is an excellent hot dish to make at home and take along, keep it hot in newspapers. BAKED WEINER AND SPAGHETTI. 2 cups spaghetti cooked 2 medium onions 2 green peppers chopped 1 clove garlic 1/4 cup oil 1 pound wieners, ground 1/2 cup catsup 1 can tomato sauce 2 tablespoons lemon juice Fry the peppers, onions and garlic in the oil, add the meat and fry for five minutes, then add remaining ingredients and simmer for five minutes and combine with spaghetti, bake in a buttered casserole for 20 to 30 minutes.

Play Suit Clever for Beach Wear

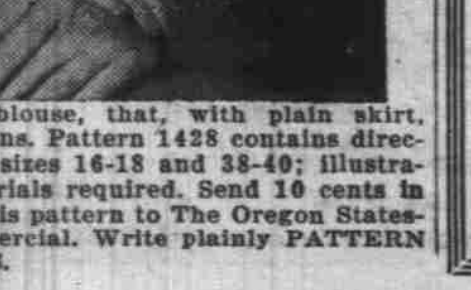

A clever feature was seen in a commercially made play suit that would be practical for the home dressmaker. The playsuit, of the one-piece short and blouse variety, zips from neck to crotch with a slide fastener. Makes it easy to wrap into and simple to iron. Wrap around skirts that fasten with a slide are practical and easier to keep closed than when buttoned or left by themselves.

Father's Day Is One to Humor Family Head

Father does have his day, though it's less of a holiday than when mothers are honored. Tomorrow will be the day for humoring dad. Plan a picnic or outing just where he wants to go, and let him know it even if the family has followed his ideas for years. Buy him something, and feed him favorite dishes.

Father's day should be one where there's special company for the honored guest. Let him choose his own for the occasion. About presents, if he's a gardener maybe some shrubs, plants, garden tools or even a lawn mower will please him. If he's a craftsman or a handyman, tools will be his choice. Perhaps a new pipe wrench and a good assortment of washers will be inspiration to his plumbing talents; or a turning lathe, jig saw or new plane will inspire his creative instincts.

Athletic, he might like a set of golf clubs, but more to the family's advantage a croquet set or a badminton net. Still with an eye to the family's good, a new set of socks will make it possible to discard the worn ones; a new sweater will make it practical to give the old one to the rummage sale; a new shirt will send the worn one into the rag bag for dusting purposes.

If he's an epicure, a fancy cheese may be what he'd like, or some sort of real fancy canned food, or a keg of salt herring. Maybe dad has never sported a box of candy all his own, if he's a lover of licorice, might get the candy dealer to pack up a box of assorted black candies of which there are a great variety. Or if chocolates are his favorite try a ravishing box of rich sweets to simply ruin his figure for the day.

Short Study Course Aids Gardeners

Eastern garden enthusiasts are being given the opportunity to study the subject from an angle of their own now that Cornell university has announced a short course of training for judges and exhibitors. The course only lasts for a few days but is planned to include recommendations in soil preparation, fertilizers, flower culture, insect control and the intricacies of staging and judging flower shows. Rose gardening will be a special division of the course, which would be practical to duplicate in departments of horticulture and floriculture throughout the country.

Preserves Combine Lemon, Berries

Lemon juice gives flavor and a bright color to this strawberry preserves. It's a favorite with several young housewives of Salem.

STRAWBERRY-LEMON PRESERVES

2 boxes strawberries 5 cups sugar 1/2 cup lemon juice Let sugar and strawberries stand for four hours or overnight. Then boil for eight minutes and add the lemon juice, skim and boil for another three minutes. Pour into shallow pans to cool and bottle cold. Marshalls or other eating berries are better for this preserve than the canning varieties which remain too hard.

Markets Bright With Green Vegetables

Strawberries are on the go for canning, so should be preserved pretty quick before the peak of the season goes. Raspberries made their appearance in the market this week early variety and not large, but the beginning of the season anyway.

Rhubarb is still an important offering for desserts. Bananas are good, citrus fruits inexpensive. Cherries are coming soon. Yellow wax beans appeared late last week and are still in some shops although not nearly as abundant as green beans. New peas are grand, some from the coast are exceptionally good. Scalloped and zucchini are the first summer squashes to appear and begin the supply that will last late into the summer.

Cauliflower is good and makes an excellent salad or cooked vegetable. Turnips and carrots are shown alongside new beets. Spinach is about the only green for cooking. Lettuce, cucumbers, radishes and tomatoes remain the best bets for salad. Green peppers are showing in enthusiastic quantities. Asparagus remains a popular vegetable for family use. Melons are coming in several varieties, watermelons are included.

Once you may have longed to be the heroine of a novel but—today's heroines? Better to look the real life part. Easy, too, in a summer evening gown of brassy pink organdy with a deep, swirling border on the skirt and a tiny bolero of plain white organdy. Or an Egyptian print forming horizontal stripes, firmly shirred over the hips, the bodice just plain and fitted. Both very effective.—Copyright, 1938. Esquire Features, Inc.
