the rear of the mill, picked them up and drove back to Portland. Ask Rosser About Payment for Job
"Banks had told us we were to get a lot of money, so two days later we went to Salem to see him, but we couldn't find him. Newlands and I went to see Al Rosser in the labor temple in Portland and told him we were the ones who did the job in Salem and we wanted to know where we could find Banks. Rosser said he didn't know anything about it and told us we'd have to see Banks.
"Banks gave us $65 the next day and I threw it in his face. Then he gave us $10 more and we took it. That made $105 in all.
Carson said he had pleaded guilty to five felonies and two misdemeanors in connection with labor vandalism, but had not been sentenced for any offense. Vanderveer, who said in his opening statement he would prove that Carson and others now awaiting sentence were promised immunity if they testified for the state, was told by Carson that he had not been promised a delay of sentence until after the Rosser trial.
Banks told how Rosser got the job as business agent for the Salem local in July, 1937. He said that the mill was picketed because it hired non-union drivers, and that teamster dues were $2.50 a month and the initiation fee $25.
Gasoline Purchase Told by Portlander
Other witnesses who testified today were John F. Nash, Portland gasoline station operator who sold the gas to burn the mill to Newlands, Carson and Moore; J. E. Funk, night watchman at the mill; and Ernest Friesen, son of John Friesen, mill owner.
Circuit Judge Arlie G. Walker excluded all witnesses from the courtroom, but allowed Vanderveer's motion to prevent attorneys from telling their witnesses of testimony of preceding witnesses.
Vanderveer and Ralph E. Moody, special prosecutor appointed by Governor Martin, clashed several times, the principal occasion being when District Attorney Bruce Spaulding asked Carson to tell of his other vandalism activities.
When Carson said he burned two trucks on the instructions of Clarence Adams, head of the Portland teamster hiring hall, who will be tried on the same arson charge, Vanderveer objected on the grounds that the testimony would be prejudicial to Rosser. Judge Walker sustained the objection.
"I would have no objection if the coordinator (Moody) would show that Rosser had anything to do with the burning of these two trucks," Vanderveer said.
"I will," thundered Moody.
"Cutting Remarks"
"I am amazed that a member of the bar would place his professional standing in jeopardy by making a statement like that," Vanderveer answered.
A few minutes later Moody asked the court to request Vanderveer "to cut out these cutting side remarks. Professional men don't engage in them."
Vanderveer moved for dismissal of the case after Spaulding's opening argument, charging that the indictment accuses Rosser of setting the fire whereas Spaulding said that Rosser only aided and abetted the crime. The court rejected the motion.
Spaulding said in his opening statement that Rosser sent the three men to Banks to burn the mill, whereas Vanderveer said Banks and the three who actually burned the mill were promised immunity if they would implicate Rosser.

Power Line Grant Legality Doubted

WASHINGTON, June 30—(AP)—Doubt of the legality of providing $21,375,725 for power line construction at Bonneville dam on the Columbia river was expressed today by Administrator Ickes of the PWA.
The amount had been asked as a loan by J. D. Ross, Bonneville administrator, in the hope of speeding up distribution of the power soon to be generated at the plant.
At his press conference, Ickes said the amount asked was considerably more than the usual PWA grant. He said it might not provide sufficient employment to workers both at the scene of construction and in factories which would provide materials.
Ross' office at Portland said yesterday the job would provide more than 7,000,000 man-hours of direct labor.

more for three singles and a double, interspersed by a walk and Kellogg's failure to block Dryman's throw from left field. The fourth inning tally came as Steinke threw wild to first on Johnson's ground ball; Comstock backing up first, in turn tossed wild to second in an effort to cut Johnson down there; and Steinke let Siegmund's toss from center go through him at third.
Twenty-three's tying tally also came on a boot, Kellogg scoring after singling into right field in the seventh, the fielder letting the ball roll through him.
Tommy Dryman, 20-30 left fielder, collected three singles in four trips to lead the hitters.

Cherry Growers, Both Commercial And Back Door Ones, May Lose out Unless Maggot Control Is Started

Right at the peak of the Royal Anne cherry harvest one of the older hands at the canning game here has taken time off to point out that unless cherry growers begin to get concerned, the 5000 to 6000-ton cherry industry here is going to go by the boards due to the cherry maggot.
"The maggot is getting worse here year by year, and unless something is done, and done now, to make growers realize the situation, there is going to be a big loss," one canner declared.
As he spoke he exhibited a handful of beautifully colored and shaped and apparently sound Royal Annes. These were samples from about 2000 pounds that the grower had brought in and that the canner had to reject because a test showed the maggot. The maggot is hard to find in the raw cherry, but on a two-pound sample run through the canner's cooker and then subjected to the worm heat test, the pest shows up readily.
To Ask Federal Aid
Canners and leading growers in Marion, Polk, Linn, Lane and Yamhill county have started a move to take the problem up with Senator Charles McNary and Congressman James McNary in hope that the federal government may be interested in taking some steps to fight the maggot in this section.
The thing most needed is a concentrated spray program on part of the grower, both of commercial orchards and backyard orchards, the city limits, canners declare.

King Bing Hill declared yesterday that the state junior drum corps contest to be staged on Sweetland field at 8 p.m. Saturday, following closing of the capitol, would be one of the most colorful outdoor shows presented to a Salem audience in many years. Colorful costumes under the brilliant light of spotlights, stirring rhythms and drills performed with the precision inspired by stiff competition are promised, he said.
The contest, bringing at least five drum corps to the city, will conclude the Cherrian-planned capitol celebration.
The celebration will open at 1:30 p.m. Saturday with a parade of musical and marching organizations—Cherrians, Rosarians, Newberg Berrians, Eugene Radicators, Oregon City Territorial Days representatives, Molalla Buckeroo punchers, St. Paul rodeo envoys, American Legionnaires, Boy Scouts and others—and state and guest officials.

Body Seen but Not Recovered

In Inaccessible Spot on Opposite Side From That of Whitmer

Sandia peak, is the body of Medill McCormick.
"The discovery was made by an organized crew of Isleta and Sandia Indians, under the leadership of Marion Peace of the U. S. Indian service, while working in close proximity to a forest service searching party.
"The body was in such an inaccessible spot that it will be impossible to recover it until late Friday.
"On the basis of present information, it now seems that Medill McCormick's body was found approximately on the opposite side of the cliff from where the body of Richard Whitmer was recovered last Friday."
McCormick was the possessor of an income which enabled him to indulge his tastes in travel and adventure. Mountain climbing was by no means the least of these hobbies, and he climbed during his young life all over the Rockies.
A week ago Wednesday, on June 22, McCormick in the company of Richard Whitmer, 20, left his mother's big ranch house on the outskirts of Albuquerque to climb towering, mile-high Sandia peak, considered by expert climbers as one of the stouter tests of the southern Rockies.
With a lunch, alpine climbing stocks, knapsacks and sneakers, the two boys started up the mountain side at what was estimated to be around noon.
It must have been some time toward mid-afternoon that they reached the sheer side of the "Shield," a perpendicular cliff near the summit of the peak. It was not long after this time that a mountain storm poured torrents down the peak.
Before coming up the mountain, the boys parked Whitmer's small car in an arroyo near Juan Tabo canyon, the only place accessible to the peak for an automobile.
The car, with the boys' effects, was found there a few hours before the discovery of "Dicky" Whitmer's broken body at the foot of the Shield.

Seeks Probe Into Identity of Kuhn

ALBANY, N.Y., June 30—(AP)—Rep. Samuel B. Dickstein (D-N.Y.) called tonight for a congressional committee investigation of Fritz Kuhn, national leader of the German-American Bund, "to see if he is the German spy held in an American camp during the World War."

Vatican Deplores Civilian Bombing

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, June 30—(AP)—The Holy See reaffirmed its abhorrence of bombings of civilian populations in pronouncements today on both Spain and China.
A papal appeal to the Japanese government to spare non-combatants as far as possible was disclosed as Pope Pius personally expressed his pleasure on receiving promises from Gen. Francisco Franco, Spanish insurgent leader, "to limit victims and suffering of war."
A Vatican news service said the pope had appealed to Tokyo to "spare the civil population insofar as possible" in conducting aerial bombardments in China. Representations were made through the apostolic delegate in Tokyo, Monsignor Paolo Marella.
The news service said the Japanese government had replied to the appeal by saying it would be treated with "consideration and deference."

Boycott Is Aimed At Portland Mill

PORTLAND, Ore., June 30—(AP)—Workers union spokesmen said today that the CIO and AFL in the jurisdictional fight for months, today became the target for another AFL boycott.
AFL Lumber and Sawmill Workers union spokesmen said they were unsuccessful in negotiating an agreement with the management. They claim the affiliation of more than 175 of the company's 200 employees.
Mill owners declined to comment on renewal of an action which crippled their market last winter and spring. They said they would close down until Tuesday.
The mill has been defendant in a national labor relations board hearing for several months. In this action the CIO charged the company with discrimination.
