Control Measure For Earwigs Is Offered by Leth

DALLAS—W. C. Leth, Polk county agent, states that his office has received a number of requests for information on the control of earwigs. He states that the quickest method of control, although not 100 per cent effective is that of poisoning them by means of a poison bran bait which is mixed according to the following formula: Bran 12 lbs., sodium fluosilicate 1 lb., fish oil, 1 quart. Mix dry bran and sodium fluosilicate together first, then add the fish oil and mix again. No water is used in the preparation of this bait.

Place the bait along fence rows, piles of boards or wood piles, near trees and shrubbery, and any other place where earwigs might hide. Sometimes the poison is also scattered on the lawn and where this is done no sprinkling should be done for two or three days. It is important to keep the bait away from children as well as chickens and other birds.

The county agent's office also has information on securing parasites through the city of Portland which in the long run is the most practical way of reducing the earwig population. It is necessary in cities for a number of property owners to cooperate in the distribution of these parasites.

Pleasant Grove Reunion July 17

Church Built by Pioneers Is Oldest in Constant Use in West

TURNER—The annual homecoming day of the Pleasant Grove church will be Sunday, July 17, with the usual basket dinner. Rev. T. Y. Stewart of Albany, pastor for the past few years, will speak at 11 o'clock and Rev. O. W. Payne, Sunday school missionary of Willamette presbytery, will give the afternoon address at about 2 o'clock.

It is expected that a number of the old friends of the church will be present. The church building is conceded to be the oldest church west of the Rocky mountains in constant use since its erection in pioneer days, under the inspiration of Rev. Phillip Condit, who died before its completion. Rev. J. A. Hanna also helped lay plans for the church but died before its erection.

Original Room Intact
Rev. Condit's oldest sons, Cyrenus and Sylvanus, carried out the plans and with other help completed in 1858 the one-room building which accommodated about 75 persons and which remains practically the same, with the old stove, pews and pulpit with its first bible. Needed repairs have been made and a new porch added. The same foundation holds with the frame hewed out of logs from timber on the ground, put together with wooden pins and lumber hauled from Oregon City and put on with hand wrought nails. All are well preserved and stand a monument to the piety and sturdiness of purpose of the early pioneers.

A neat little cemetery joins the grounds, the resting place of a number of those who worshipped in the little church that was built with much sacrifice, and where the families yet lived in their first log houses.

Car Demolished; Men, Dog Unhurt

JEFFERSON—Friday afternoon Frank Blum and Tom Smith of Jefferson narrowly escaped death in an accident about 8 miles above Stayton, Friday morning on their way to Detroit to work in the timber. Their car was crowded off the road; and in order to avoid a head-on collision, their car got into loose gravel, and went down the steep embankment, practically demolishing it.

The men jumped clear of the car, and escaped with bad bruises. Blum's dog was also in the car, and he went through the windshield and disappeared.

The next morning they went in search of the dog and found some one had stolen $12 worth of groceries, tools and other articles they were taking along. After searching two days for the dog, they found him tied in a woodshed at a farmer's home.
