Homemakers Camp Set July 27-31

Women of Marion County Are Eligible to Join Instruction Period

A homemakers' vacation camp of four days for women of Marion county is being arranged by the home economics division of the extension service of Oregon State college, according to Harry L. Riches, county agent.

The camp will be held at Long Bow camp on the South Santiam from July 27 to 31.

The purpose of the camp is to provide a restful, inspiring and instructive vacation period at a minimum cost. Any homemaker in Marion county, whether from city or country, is eligible to enroll. Registration can be made at the office of the county agent.

Family Day Sunday

Many interesting features will be available to the homemakers, including swimming, aature study, crafts, campfire programs, a choice library and other activities. The last day of camp, Sunday, will be family day, when all the families of campers will be invited to be guests of the camp to spend the day. There will be no dishwashing, meal planning or cooking required of the campers. An excellent cook and two assistants are employed for this purpose.

The cost will be $2.50 in cash and produce from the home supply, for the entire period of four days. Those campers who prefer not to bring produce will be charged $1.00 a day, or a total of $4.00.

Everyone will arrange her own transportation. Those planning to take their own cars and desiring passengers should inform the county agent.

Fehl Committal Decree Upheld

High Court Says Jackson Man's Sanity Hearing Properly Conducted

The state supreme court Tuesday affirmed the decree of Circuit Judge H. D. Norton of Jackson county committing Earl H. Fehl, ex-Jackson county judge, to the state hospital for the insane.

Attorneys for Fehl contended that a jury should have sat at the insanity hearing but the court held that a jury was not necessary. The complaint against Fehl was signed by Fred W. Kelly of Medford.

"Whenever the defendant has, in the judgment of the superintendent of the state hospital, recovered from his unfortunate mental condition, he will, without doubt, be discharged," the court said.

Prior to being committed to the state hospital, Fehl served four years in the state penitentiary for ballot thefts in Jackson county. He was paroled by Governor Charles H. Martin.

Fehl was received at the state hospital here December 20, 1937.
