Four Farm Products in Excellent Condition, July 1 Report

PORTLAND, July 16—(AP)—Four Oregon crops—wheat, prunes, pears and cherries—should carry off the productive banners of the state if the July 1 crop estimates of the US department of agriculture are not upset.

The annual mid-year survey of the state's crops released today by the department showed that most crops, suffering either from the sudden dryness of June or pests or a combination of both would approximate the 1937 yields or the 1927-36 average.

Oats, barley, crop, hops appeared to be the principal sufferers showing the greatest drop from the 1937 figures.

Wheat Gets Breaks

The spring wheat crop, although off from 1937 but ahead of the 1927-36 average, was more than bolstered by a strong winter wheat crop, which approached the average and was up about 60 per cent from a year ago.

The favorable condition of the winter wheat crop resulted from the fact that most of the Cascades the weather delivered the farmer a real break by pouring down rain almost at the exact time it was needed. West of the Cascades this lack of rain was causing "very poor" spring-seeded crops and yields in all of this class were considerably below average.

Although the June dryness affected some fruit crops, the majority were not harmed because of the large amount of moisture in the soil to offset the surface drought.

Listed Is Tabulated

By crops, the department's survey showed:
Winter wheat—Indicated production 18,755,000; 1937—8,880,000; 1927-36 average—14,924,000 bushels.
Spring wheat—Indicated production 1,440,000; 1937—1,440,000; 1927-36 average—1,440,000 bushels.
Barley—Indicated production 1,800,000; 1937—1,800,000; 1927-36 average—1,800,000 bushels.

Market Falls Short of Top

NEW YORK, July 16—(AP)—For the third time in the past two weeks the stock market today assaulted the portals of the June-July recovery peaks and failed to break through.

While the list pushed up fractions to more than a point at the start of the brief session—steels, motors, coppers and specialties were favored—profit selling just before the close cut down extreme gains substantially.

At the top, however, a number of new year's highs were posted.

Despite belated pressure from traders who wished to cash in over the weekend, the Associated Press average of 60 issues emerged with a net gain of 4 of a point at 48.2, or 2 1/2 points under the top mark for 1938 posted July 2. On the week the composite was up .6 of a point.

The activity was slightly ahead of last Saturday—transfers totaled 627,270 shares against 592,000.

"HE STOLEN GOD"

By Edison Marshall

Holden, returning to Bangkok, Siam, from a dangerous mission into the Annamite country, seems a typical American tourist. Son of a Yankee mother and an American missionary, Ned had been reared by native nurses and had spoken the native languages before his own. Officially an ethnologist, actually he is a secret service man for the King of Siam. Holden meets an American girl, Virginia Griffin, just arrived in Bangkok with her father, noted art collector, and André Chambon, a young French vicomte who is Griffin's secretary and Vietnam fiancé. Soon thereafter Holden is told of the theft of the famous Emerald Buddha from the royal temple. It must be restored to its shrine before the Siamese winter festival. Griffin is under suspicion. . . . Holden, under protest, consents to investigate and, next day, searches the Griffin rooms at the hotel. Virginia returns unexpectedly and finds him there. He must allow the girl he already loves to believe him a common thief. Virginia lets him go and mentions the incident to no one. Next morning, the Griffin party leaves for the interior of French Indo-China, with the ancient city of Laos as their goal. On recommendation of the French governor, a supposed Laotian headman named Pu-Bow whom he has recognized as a Laotian baron in disguise. He also distrusts old Nokka who had been hired as maid for Virginia. Chambon tells Virginia of a wondrous bronze jar he hopes to secure for her father's collection. Angered by Chambon's fanatical interest in oriental customs, Virginia repulses his advances.

They danced when he interpreted the talk of the stalls, and who delighted she was when he banded jests that made the crowd roar and the young Laotian maidens hide their faces. But Chambon was in his glory too, talking French to the mandarins, and waving his arms and laughing. He bought several pieces of needlework, a copper lamp that had lighted a joss-house when the Caesars reigned in Rome, and a little figure in jade with onyx eyes and a face of incredible evil.

A little while later Chambon hastily stopped the car. Through a rift in the trees his quick eye had

They drove on, seeking more adventure—and it came to meet them in the road.

As they swept around a bend, a new-fallen tree barred their way. The drivers pulled up; instantly four little men, naked except for loin cloths and armed with small bows and poisoned arrows, sprang up from the shadows of the jungle. They were Khas from the hills. At once their spokesman stepped forward and saluted.

"I would speak to the great lords," he said in the goblin, deep-throated Kha tongue.

Chambon turned quickly to Ned.

Toots and Casper

LOOK AT THAT ROAD-HOG TRYING TO BEAT ME ACROSS THAT INTERSECTION— HE CAN'T STEAL THE RIGHT OF WAY FROM ME!

HONK—

HE MAY SCARE THOSE OTHER CARS, BUT HE CAN'T BLUFF ME! HE CAN'T CUT ME OFF IF I HAVE TO WRECK HIM!

WOWIE! THOSE CARS CAME TOGETHER ALMOST HEAD ON!

CRASH—

WHY DON'T YOU LOOK WHERE YOU'RE GOING? LET ME SEE YOUR LICENSE— ER—ER— GEE, IS THAT YOU, COLONEL HOOVER?

GOSH, CASPER! I'M SORRY—I HAD NO IDEA THAT WAS YOUR CAR!
