Black Dominates Fall Colors Price Says After Trip East; Merchandising Upswing Seen

Oscar Price, who has just returned from a buying trip to New York city for the Price Shoe company, reports a decided upturn in merchandising in the eastern city. "The stock market seems to be making advances that are reflected in the mercantile business," said Price in an interview. "There's a decidedly better feeling among manufacturers."

New style trends as well as market conditions were the object of the trip on which Price was accompanied by Mrs. Esther Foster, ready-to-wear buyer for the store.

"Colors in high style are black (for early fall), green, brown and wine, with black 85 per cent. Mat-lasse is the important material and skirt lengths are usually 14 inches," said Price.

Wool, Tweeds Favored—There will be lots of wool worn this fall and winter according to the report, and fur boleros will be popular. For coats, fleece is out and tweeds of rough texture are very much in. There will be many imported novelty fabrics and later solid colors will appear.

"Practically every window in New York carries a sign 'Everything's gone black' and everything in the style world has, for a while," continued Mr. Price.

The Salem visitors were in New York when Hughes left on his famous "round the world flight," and were present at the big parade staged on his completion of the trip.

Beans, Corn Freeze Next

Jory Plans to Place Locally Frozen Products With Downtown Market

About 100 tons of beans from the Blue Lake producers and between 600 and 1000 tons of corn will be frozen at the Jory Packing company quarters at the Terminal Ice and Cold Storage plant on Front street, starting in about two weeks.

Corn both on the cob and cut will be frozen, and all new equipment has been added for the corn operations, including Sprague-Sell large corn cutters and a Peerless automatic husker, which machinery working as a unit will turn out three tons of corn in an hour.

Jory has also installed new boilers, all automatic oil burners and tanks and other machinery. The only Salem operator on frozen vegetables, Jory has already handled some asparagus and spinach this season, and will include also broccoli in this year's deal.

Jory has completed cold pack of berries, handling between 500 and 600 tons this way. At the Liberty cannery, processing and packing of dried blackcaps is in progress. The berries were dried at the Frank Hrubetz drier.

Jory states that he hopes soon to have his frozen vegetables available at some downtown market, as there is considerable demand among Salem people for the product.

Use Terminal Ice Plant—Prior to opening of the freezing season this spring, the Terminal Ice and Cold Storage company added a large sharp refrigerated storage unit of about 320,000 cubic feet of space, which gives the plant a total of nearly a million cubic feet of storage space. Chief users of the storage space are the Woodburn cannery, which this year has in operation a large plant for frozen fruits and vegetables, and the Jory plant.

The new Terminal Ice structure is 144 by 124 feet, two stories high, with exterior walls of hollow tile 12 inches thick. The storage space is divided into several large rooms, refrigerated to a temperature of zero by cold air blasts carried through overhead plywood ducts.
