"I got rid of Bill easily enough, but I never thought it would be so hard to get him back again!"

Ah, me!—The surprise fate sometimes holds in store for girls. And our tall blonde so sensible and practical as a rule—as betokened by her short-sleeved robe of navy flannel. Its white bands suggest a yoke at the neck and set off the blue buttons all down the front. Ribbed rayon makes a grand year-round robe and, as right, is right smart with its wide shoulders, flaring lapels and side closing.—Copyright, 1938, Esquire Features, Inc.

Cabin Camps on Trip Found an Economy

Vacations for many mean covering as much distance as possible, arriving home just in time to go back to another year's work without enjoying a minute of real relaxation. For other families a holiday means a good rest at the ocean, or camping in the mountains, or finding relaxation through strenuous physical exercise in the open air, all of which prepare the office worker for another year's labor.

For the one whose vacation is to be spent mostly in the car, there can be plenty of pleasure and good rest. For the man or woman who tires when driving, it is a good idea to stop, stand up and stretch and readjust driver's seat occasionally so fatigue is less noticeable.

Staying in cabin camps has become a practical economy for tourists who find them clean and handy. Of course you pay for what you get, but even the most expensive, which furnish all the comforts of a good hotel, are economical.

A list of the best cabin camps can be had from an authorized gasoline dealer or at the AAA office in any town.

Those who stop in cabins may find certain things necessary, not needed in hotel rooms. Towels are a good thing to have along as some tourist cabins do not furnish them. Soap, too, is a needed piece of equipment in traveling this way.

As showers are sometimes away from the cabin, a warm bathrobe is almost a necessity, rubber slippers or a rubber mat to put in the shower may save the bather from athlete's foot.

(A good precaution to take in any unfamiliar shower or dressing room.)

If outdoor air in the mountains or at the beach is a feature your party wishes to enjoy, include oil
