

Pear Packing Starts on 20th

Extent of Local Pack Still Undetermined, Due to Market Situation

Salem canneries will begin packing pears around August 20, though to what extent is still undetermined. Usually the pear pack is one of the largest of the entire year in spite of the fact that only one, the Producers' co-op, handles locally grown pears. The big deal here is usually on Medford and Yakima pears. Information from the Paulus Bros. cannery is that that plant will handle about the same tonnage as last year, and Reid Murdoch and company will also handle some pears. Whether Hunt Bros. will remain to be seen.

The big pack last year with elephantine holdover has put a crimp in pear operations this year, not only for the canners but also for the growers, with reports from Medford this week indicating that top price for pears has been $17.50 a ton.

Peach Deal Hangs Fire

Whether any peaches will be canned here this year is still problematic, this situation too being muddled by the big pack last year and low opening prices this year. Paulus Bros. made a peach pack last year, but with peach packing in California being handled on a co-op basis this year due to demoralized market conditions, local packers are undecided whether to work peaches.

Meantime, the largest bean pack in years is going on in two local canneries, the Blue Lake co-op plant in West Salem, formerly the Hillman cannery, and the Oregon Packing company on 14th street. The 1938 bean pack for Oregon Packing marks its first bean deal since 1930, for six years prior to which this cannery pioneered the bean industry. Oregon Packing is handling the Blue Lake beans from the West Stayton area.

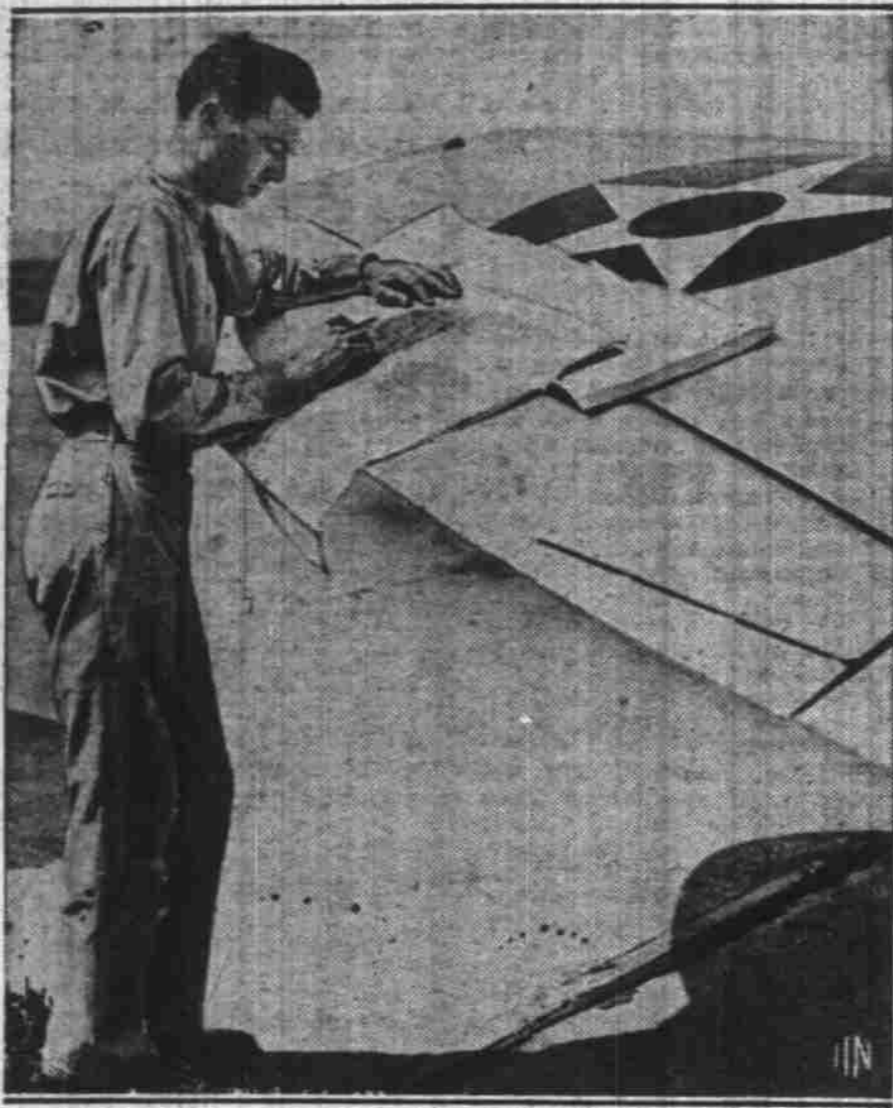

Some evergreen blackberries are coming into local plants, but the 3 cent control price has held up a fair size pack of these. At the Paulus plant, where the eastern Oregon cherry deal is just at an end, a few blackberries are being handled on a cooperative basis.

Campfire Girls Recreation Ends

Successful Session Is Held at Beautiful Site Near Falls City

DALLAS—The Dallas-Corvallis Campfire Girls' summer camp, "Camp Kilowan" closed the first of this week after a successful season. The camp has been open the past month under the direction of Mrs. Cecilia Greenwood of Corvallis. An average of about 65 Campfire Girls were accommodated at the camp, coming from Albany, Corvallis, Salem, Monmouth, Valsetz, Portland and even from California. This is the second year it has been open.

The camp is located about two miles from Falls City on Lake Kiloqua in beautiful surroundings. There is a large lodge which is used for recreational purposes and for a dining hall, seven smaller cabins and one large cabin which are used for sleeping quarters.

The staff included a registered nurse, a doctor, and 13 councilors. Classes were offered in swimming and many other sports as well as classes in various kinds of handicraft and nature study classes.

Dallas Girls Assist

Miss Doris Riggs, Miss Margaret Riggs and Miss Jean Tharp, all of Dallas; Miss Ruth Olson, Miss Janet Richens and Miss Vivian Kadruno, all of Corvallis, were among those who acted as councilors at Camp Kilowan this year.

It is hoped that next year additional cabins may be built so that more girls can be accommodated.

Rider Home Scene Of Garden Affair

Salem Woman Feted as Early Days Recalled at Reception

GATES—Mrs. U. S. Rider entertained with a garden party at her home to honor Mrs. Allie Fleck and Mrs. Frank Medler, both of Salem. Friends called from 2 to 9 p. m. The evening was spent around a camp fire listening to many pioneer stories told by the hostesses.

Mrs. Fleck is 82 years old and is the daughter of Rev. G. H. White, who settled on the first homestead at Elkhorn on the little north fork of the Santiam. Rev. White's family was one of the first three families to settle in this community. He attended the laying of the cornerstone of the first state capitol. During his last illness, in 1855, he performed the wedding ceremony of this granddaughter, who is now Mrs. Medler of Wasco.
