County Agrees To Pay Third

The county court yesterday agreed to pay one-third the $3,-791 estimated local cost of the dam project, or up to $1500, and Fred A. Williams, special sewer committee chairman, announced.

The two dams will be located approximately a mile southeast of penitentiary, where water from Mill creek is diverted into Shelton ditch. They will replace temporary structures built in 1934 and washed almost completely out by last winter's unusually high water. The creek banks will be walled up with stone 100 feet above the dams and the banks of both streams rip-rapped for a distance of 200 feet below.

Option Is Taken On Quarry Site

Alderman Williams advised the council his committee already had taken an option on the quarry site, seven miles southeast of the city, near Witzel school. In exchange for 2000 yards of rock, the state forestry department will open the quarry, which contains a good grade of sandstone, he said.

Mayor Kuhn yesterday afternoon expressed the hope that Shelton ditch would be made not only safe from the standpoint of floods but also an attractive stream, "not just an ugly ditch. Representing two other proper ty owners, George N. Patterson and Hannah E. Purvine, located near the old city auto park, Guy O. Smith, attorney, informed the council they were ready to cooperate if given assurance their lands would be protected from floods next winter but warned that they had court remedies on which to fall back.

Then, in conclusion, he said he wanted to thank publicly four legislators who had steered the present social security program through congress.

The first one he mentioned was Lewis, who is campaigning in the democratic senatorial primary in Maryland against Senator Tydings, opponent of some major new deal proposals. Others lauded were Rep.
