NEW YORK, Aug. 31 .- (A)-Two strange Bedfellows of sport broke bread and sipped an Italian count's champagne today as they patched forevermore a feud that caused an international incident

seven years ago. The chief characters were Gar Wood, the silvery fox of Harmsworth trophy fame, and Kaye Don, British sportsman who almost lost his life because of the sly Wood's racing skullduggery back in 1931, Here to greet Count Theo Rossi Di Montelera of Italy, in America to try for the famous gold cup speed boat honors, Wood and Don toasted each other like duclists who had fought their fight, gained honor and again become fast pals. As they parted, Wood wore a broad smile. The one blotch of his escutcheon as a sportsman, he believed, had been erased.

Perhaps no sports event even caused as much international yowling, howling and criticism as the Wood-Don incident. Don a British war hero, had come to Detroit with a remarkable boat, Miss England 3rd, to challenge the mischievous Wood. Wood then rode the watery crests like Bobby Jones did the bunkers of gold. So excited did the country become over this race of "tubs" that one figured the honor of England and America were staked on the result of the race. But the sly Wood figured out a scheme to fool the Englishman. He did. More than that, the trick almost cost Don his

Wood entered two boats in the race. As the skiffs jockeyed toward the starting line, Wood's second boat beat the starter's gun over the starting line. It was a neat decoy. Don shot his boat across, too, and it was all over. As he stood disqualified, along with Wood's decoy boat, the cagey Wood sent his craft across the line exactly on time. Victory was easy. In the ensuing mixup, Don cracked up. Medical skill saved his life, as sportsmen the world over condemned Wood.

Wood, to this very day, has been trying to get back into good graces among the sportsmen of the world. He has more than paid the price of one mistake. So, today, las he wined and dined with the man he once fooled, sportsmen applauded. The near tragic incident was forgotten.

Coach Alvin Bob McMillin, of the Collegians, used 48 players with the second-place New York from his squad of 66 to score Giants. the victory, which was classed as a distinct surprise by followers of professional football.

The Washington Redskins, famous for their passing type of slugging Sammy Baugh as the 12 to 3 victory in the nightcap. pitcher, found this kind of play boomerang that brought about their defeat. Intercepted passes by the alert all-stars, resulted not only in two touchdown runs, but also put them in position to score on easy field

Isbel Is Star The Collegians revealed a forward passing artist in Cecil Isbel, former Pardue star, who succeeded in matching Baugh's artistry in flinging the pigskin. Pittsburgh He tossed one touchdown shot for 40 yards, and overshadowed the efforts of the famous Byron White of Colorado, who was tessed into the game as Isbell's

Ex-Champ Gives Apostoli Advice

Jack Root, 62, one-time light heavyweight champion of the world and another time contender for the world's heavyweight title, is pictured as he recently visited a San Francisco gymnasium to see young Joe Roche, California bantamweight champ, and Fred Apostoli, contender for the world's middleweight championship, go through their paces. Root said he liked the looks of Apostoli, who, he said, compares with any of the past middleweights with the exception of the "greatest of them all-Tommy Ryan." Ryan, he said, taught him, Jack O'Brien and Kid McCoy what they knew about boxing. Photo shows Root (right) showing Fred Apostoli how to
