Wheat Is Bucking Tide

Chicago Mart Drops a Bit While England, Canada Hit new Lows

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Although losing fractions, Chicago wheat prices today continued to buck the recession under way in other world markets.

While Liverpool and Winnipeg quotations fell as much as one and two cents a bushel respectively to new low levels for the past several years, and Rotterdam dropped 2 1/2 to 4 1/2, the Chicago market followed this decline only partially and before the close exhibited recovery power. Some traders attributed this independent action to the effect of operation of the export subsidy program.

An explanation offered by Bartlett Frazier Co., for example was that removal of hedges in connection with government cash wheat buying gave a certain stability to the domestic market, though the effect elsewhere of the program was evident in weakness of competing markets. A continuation of the program, it was said, would throw Chicago further out of line.
