

Charter Change Goes to Voters

Lebanon Council Takes Steps to Have Building Inspector There

LEBANON—The city council at its meeting Tuesday night adopted a resolution calling for a special election November 22 to amend parts of the city charter submitting the question that the council shall have authority to purchase, acquire or lease industrial sites within or without the city, to improve same, erect buildings and plants thereon out of funds of the city when necessary not to exceed $17,000.

The city attorney was instructed to prepare an ordinance creating the office of building inspector and instructing him in his duties.

The street committee reported the award for a foot bridge across the canal on Main street to McTimmons Brothers at a cost of $93.20.

The city attorney reported the expense of codification of ordinances as suggested by the League of Oregon Cities as excessive and as no PWA assistance could be available until next year the matter will not be taken up.

A resolution was adopted to set aside $422 to pay city part in improvements under WPA. Sidewalks were authorized in some parts of the city inside property limits on consent of the owner to preserve trees on present sidewalks.

The budget for 1939 was adopted without objection.

OSC Builds First Oregon Seismograph

No longer will earth tremors in Oregon or in surrounding states go unrecorded and unmeasured since the building and installation at Oregon State college of the first seismograph in Oregon. Long a dream and "spare-time project" of the physics department of the school of science, the seismograph has finally been put into operation, thanks to the early work of H. R. Vinyard, instructor in physics, and the later work of W. H. Moore and Miss Chung Kwai Lul, graduate assistants. A seismograph works on the principle of having a fine beam of light focused on sensitized photographic paper mounted on moving drums. The drums shown in the picture with Moore record the horizontal earth movements, both east and west and north and south.

School Budget up For Vote Monday

TURNER—The annual school budget meeting for school District No. 79 will be held Monday, at 8 p.m. at the Turner school auditorium.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at the W. T. Rigdon company chapel for Lloyd E. Hillery. He was buried at the Twin Oaks cemetery; Turner.

Mr. Hillery, who was born on the well known Hillery place and has lived there most of his life, is the last direct descendant of an old pioneer family. He leaves only his niece Dorothy H. Pieser of Albany and his sister-in-law, Avis Hillery Loshier, of Albany.

Following the regular Rebekah lodge meeting Wednesday night, a mask Hallowe'en party was held. The hall was decorated in appropriate fashion.
