Export Move

Boost Comes on Word Office May Try Sales on World Mart

CHICAGO, Nov. 2 .- (AP)-Stimulated by prospective augmented efforts to enlarge export sales, and by trade fears of a short domestic crop, wheat prices today scored late fractional gains. Special attention as the day drew to an end was given to a statement from Secretary Wallace of the department of agriculture that the farm administration might resort to direct salesmanship in its attempt to dispose of 100,000,000 bushels of United States wheat in world markets.

Snow Report Alarms Apprehension concerning a short domestic crop was emphasized by a report from B. W. Snow, leading unofficial specialist, that owing to moisture deficit and to decreased acreage demands by the government, there is no reason to expect more than normal acreage abandonment next spring in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, with a doubtful crop yield for the area that remains. At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1/8 off to 1/8 up compared with yesterday's finish, Dec. 63%, May 65%-66. Corn 16-1/2 down, Dec. 44%-1/2, May 48-48 %, oats showing 1/8 decline to ¼ advance, rye un-changed to ¼ bulge, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2 cents.

Half past four. What do young people find to DO at such an hour? Not that she worried. Aunt Bet was used to young people and their ways, she merely wondered.

She recognized her niece Margaret's voice and Sue Decker's shrill, half hysterical giggle, and nade a little face as she turned off the light, and lay back on her pil-low. That Girl! Everything in the world, more suitors than you could shake a stick at, and still breaking her silly neck to get Margaret's

He was out there now, with Margaret, and that nice Joe Atwell. As far as Aunt Bet was concerned, Sue could have the Raleigh boy. Margaret would do far better with Joe, or any of a half dozen others.

They were coming in now. She could hear the faint squeak of the front door, and the giggling as they tiptoed through the hall, on their way to the kitchen. Always giggling. She tried to think back to when she was nineteen, but she uldn't remember the giggling and the silly nothings that amused her nieces so much. Still, they were good girls. Especially Margaret. And Margaret would clean up the mess in the kitchen later so that the maid wouldn't have it to do in the morning. "

Morning. Aunt Bet sighed and losed her eyes. It was practically orning now. She'd be glad when all this Senior week festivity was over, but in two or three years she'd have to go through it all again with the younger sisters, Naalie and Barbara.

For that matter, Natalie and arbara were pretty well into it garet handed down the suitors she couldn't use, making young ladies of them, especially the baby, Babs, efore their time.

And with all the boys to choose from Margaret had to pick out the Raleigh boy. Not that she was a snob, Bet thought with pride in democracy but, when a irl has half the eligible men in a se in her picking a nobody who ust happens to be good looking and days football?

Aunt Bet sighed and turned over. It was a question that had no answer.

Downstairs, in the white, spotless kitchen, Margaret and the young man in question were busily cooking ham and eggs, while Sue and Joe balanced on the edge of the sink and shouted and giggled over the sink and shouted and giggled over the single highball they were consuming with two straws.

"Good liquor," Joe sad judicially. "But not enough of it," Sue said. "It's all you're going to get... Hey, don't drink so fast! Hey, stop! Aw, Maggie, look, she's getting it all!"
