Gridiron legions representing Willamette and Pacific universities, top schools in the 1938 season's Northwest conference, meet on this Armistice afternoon in a game which will in all probabilities decide the championship.

If you must have a football game on Armistice day, the day generally understood to stand in commemoration of a day that supposedly ended all wars, what could be more appropriate that having one of the con-testants named Pacific? To be specific, pacific in its original essence meant "peaceable, peaceful, not warlike." Hence, on this day which is dedicated to peace, we have Pacific university as one of the contestants in a football game that will decide the Northwest conference title for 1938. To make the invaders even more a memorial to peace, they are nicknamed after one of the most peace-loving animals in existence-the Badger.

May Burrow Thru.

Should the Badgers succeed, it is highly probbale that never again will such a string of consecutive wins be amassed in the oldest football conference in the north-

Folgate Leads 'Em.

"Brains" of the Pacific team is Coach Roger Folgate, who took over the Badger athletic program in 1936, Coach "Rog" spent eight years, from 1926-34, under the old maestro of the conference, "Nig" Borleske. Folgate went to Whitman as physican education director, track coach and backfield coach, following his graduation from Lake Forest college in 1926. Last year, Folgate's second season at Pacific, his grid creation finished second in the conference and was the circuit's high-scoring team.

Strong Backs.

Strength of the Badger crew is purported to be in its backfield, where an all-letterman foursome holds forth. "Feel" Says "Upset."

'Tis possible you'll see an upset, even more startling than College of Idaho's win over Pacific of last week, out on Sweetland this afternoon. All of the "feel" of this game points to a beheading of the four-times conference champs, the Willam-ette Bearcats. Take that hunch "feel" out of the picture, and
