Water Prospects Gain-Examination of two additional test drillings on Stayton island, source of the Salem municipal water supply, bear out the indication of the first that the supply may be further augmented by shallow wells, Cuyler Van-Patter, water department manager, reported yesterday. The first hole was driven on the south side and the next two on the north side of the island. The latter are each 50 feet deep. The two drilling machines being used, under contract with R. A West & Sons, will be kept in operation driving additional test holes to ascertain if the gravel formation below the level of the present intake system is
