$45,511 Required To Keep Streets

League of Cities Reports Salem System in Need of Rehabilitation

It would cost $45,511 to put Salem's city streets in proper condition for comfortable riding and to guard against excess depreciation, according to a report by state highway department engineers. That figure includes only patching and reconstruction and does not include any additional street widenings or new construction. Some Streets Run Down The original cost of Salem's street system was $4,927,553 according to the report and the value of the streets as of 1937 was estimated at $3,451,352 which can only be protected by a proper maintenance program. The system contains 73.16 miles of streets. Of this 26.40 per cent was shown to be in poor or average condition. Only 5.39 miles was shown to be in what the engineers classify as "excellent" condition. The rest was classified as follows: Good, 34.05 miles; fair, 30.54 miles; below average, 14.78 miles; and poor, 10.54 miles. Depreciation was estimated at $98,523 per year, which amount would be necessary each year for maintenance and reconstruction. That figure, however, does not include the annual debt service requirement. The League of Oregon Cities will go before the 1939 legislature and ask that a small portion of the gasoline tax and motor vehicle revenues be allocated to cities to be used solely for street maintenance and repair.

493,000 Checks Sent all Parts of State Total Large Amount
Distribution of job insurance benefits under the state unemployment compensation law passed the $5,500,000 mark Wednesday, commission officials reported. This amount was distributed in 493,000 checks and reached all sections of Oregon. The commission now has handled 90,000 original claims against the benefit fund and 30,000 of them have been paid in full for the current benefit year. New claims, based on benefit rights earned during 1938 and payable after the first of the year, have been filed by 500 applicants. Advance Signup Urged The commission has set up procedure whereby claimants eligible for 1939 benefits and now unemployed can acquire waiting period benefits prior to January and thus become eligible for a check during the first week in January. Filing of these new claims early is counted upon to relieve congestion and expedite payment of 1939 benefits.
