Breaking of French Strike Provides Stimulus for Rallies

NEW YORK, Nov. 30-(AP)-In last-minute turn toward a rally, the stock market regained today some of its November loss-

Reports the French general strike had been broken by firm government action seemed to provide the stimulus for the upturn. Stocks jerked upward at the opening on the news from France, stalled and then got going again in late dealings.

A rise in the British and French currencies against the dollar guided speculators who had been following the exchange rates as the best cue on international events which have been influencing sentiment in financial quarters lately. Brokerage house commentators expressed the opinion money centers had been watching the outcome of the French strike as another turning point for the big democracies in their efforts toward economic reconstruction.

Many Stocks Soar Gains ran from 1 to 4 in such shares as US Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Anaconda, Montgomery Ward, Du Pont, US Rubber, Consolidated Edison and Westinghouse Elec-

Transactions increased to 983,-000 shares compared with 817,-700 in the previous session. The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks advanced .9 of a point to 51.2.

CHAPTER XXV "Margaret," her father cut in, "we know that you are Sue's friend know I shan't sleep without it. But and that you feel deeply for her, but if you're too tired, dear-" it is every woman's lot to-er-to forgive at some time, and surely you agree that a reconciliation is better than a broken home and a divorce. Kenneth did wrong-he admits it—and he's sorry. But he It never failed—never! She'd even me home again. So I'm really on a wants Sue to see that, whatever it done it that night, years ago, when grand shopping binge. Reno's a live een. He loves his wife, he never loved this poor little girl-" Margaret was smiling again. But it was a crooked smile and her eyes were blazing. "Just a little hard on the other girl, don't you think?" "Tut," said her father.

"Oh, she's just a kid," Kenneth said. "She'll get over it." But for the first time his eyes lit. Margaret thought of the time, five years ago, when she'd wept her heart out over him. She was just a kid, too. But it had hurt-and the hurt had left scars. "That will be a great consolation to Sue, I'm sure," she said coldly. "But Margaret-" Ken reached for her hands. "Margaret, don't you SEE? Whatever it was with her was nothing. It was only Sue I loved-always. It was because of that, and the way she acted-oh, if I could only make you SEE!" "I'm afraid I don't see very well. a cheap little girl and then saying it's nothing, and it's only Sue you love-and she ought to forgive you. Oh, it's disgusting. If it were a love affair-a real love-if you CARED for someone else-"

Kenneth groaned. He took Margaret's hands again and this time the couldn't snatch them away. "Believe me-you must believe me, Margaret! My whole life-my whole happiness—Sue's happiness—everything depends on it. I give you my sacred word of honor, Sue is the one love of my life. I never loved another woman, I never He never loved another woman He was telling her that! This was too much. It had ceased being tragic. It was becoming, funny She must have made some sound for he sensed what she was thinking. He said:

"Margaret, it's true. Oh, when was a kid there were kid affairs. Even you and I for a little while— Mr. Wickham cleared his throat. "Yes—you and I," Margaret said. There were other little infatuations, little puppy love episodes like that—of course—naturally—" "Yes, but only Sue, really. I must have loved her always because I was never indifferent to her. I thought I just about hated her for a while, and she thinks she hates me now. But it's love-it's real love, Margaret. And I can't lose her. She's got to come back to me.

It's too big to fight. It's-" "It's no use, Kenny. You'll have to do your own talking to Susan. I wish you luck. Good night!"

"Weren't you just a little hard on him, my dear?" Margaret had a chcking feeling ck of her throat. She wanted to it her head on her father's shouler and cry her heart out. She anted to tell him what a failure she was, and how much she hated all the men in the world, especially Kenneth. But she couldn't do that, of course. And even if she did, he wouldn't understand. Nobody would understand

So she said, "I don't think so addy. Please excuse me. I'm go g upstairs to bed."
