gon play a whole football game with two hands in casts. I've seen several basketballers play crucial games when both ankles were so badly sprained they had to be taped so tightly the owners of them couldn't possibly get their heels to the floor. I know of a man who walked five miles to a doctor after a pitchfork had been kicked througo his Adam's apple

But for crazy courage I haven't seen anything to equal that disprayed by Joe Bonn Wednesday night in taking as sound a threshing as was ever administered in a ring fight. Although the word is one that probably grates on your aesthetic conscious, in sports pariance it is the only word that adequately describes that type of courage. Just plain guts.

Friend Given Dynamite.

Bonn, a sturdy youngster who has had less than 10 fights before Wednesday night, and all of those against run-of-themill punks, was tossed to the sharks.

Although Matchmaker John Friend should in a measure be chastized for matching a kid like Bonn with a larrupin' veteran like Morris, Friend is not entirely to blame. Local fandom has been clamoring for a better opponent for Bonn than the bums he has been knocking silly on armory cards.

To get someone like that, Friend had to step out of the immediate neighborhood. Which he did, sending to Seattle, I don't think even Friend realized he was being sent a bundle of black dynamite who could probably give the topnotch heavies of the country a Granite Jaw.

Those seven slabs of granite we hear so much about each foot- fore at 26-15 by halftime. ball season, they must be the same material as Bonn's jaw. The darn fool kid took wallops that through a one-hander, Kolb conactually knocked him clear off verted on Paterson's infraction the floor, no less than five times. and then flicked in a two-hander yet they failed to daze him. Each over the defense, Quesseth tossed time he'd get up his eyes would true from short in and Kolb let be clear. No less than four times fly another true aim to bring he was clouted with savage swings the score up to 35-16 with five that turned him half around, but he refused to go down.

Once in the second round and again in the third he was hit with obviously low punches, Referee Frisco Edwards admitted he saw 'em, and so did most ringsiders. Bonn, however, merely took them and kept boring in. Not once did he even act as though he'd been hit low.

But to this observer it was the effects of those below the belt Bud Jones and Helser hit hemp tlows that ultimately got Bonn. to score 12 points while Eberly, Although a flicking left sent him Fravel and Robertson were getreeling as the fourth opened, Bonn wasn't hit when he dropped to the floor the final time, clutching at his middle. He had merely taken all the beating his physical self could stand, no matter if his heart and fortitude did demand that he keep fighting.

Gains Following.

The Gervats boy had a host of ring friends in Salem before he took that lacing. After it he had twice as many. There nothing that will take the place of courage, even though it be of the nonsensical type displayed by Bonn. I say nonsensical, because he didn't have

It is now known that Bonn can take it as well as dish it out. It is known that he doesn't know the meaning of the word "quit." He has possibilities in this fight racket. They should be enhanced rather than dimmed by his terrific beating Wednesday night, but if he is overmatched many more times he'll probably lose that great fighting heart. Who wouldn't? Let's not let it happen.
