

Willamina Union Decision Reached

Court's Opinion Paves Way for Construction of Schoolhouse

WILLAMINA—Definite word was received here Wednesday that Judge Earl Latourette has handed down a decision in favor of union high school district No. 7 in the action brought against the union high school board to prove legality of the newly formed district, which has been bitterly contested. Construction of the new union high school building will start before January 1. Civic Club Entertains The civic club gave a party on Tuesday night honoring the faculty members of both the high and the grade schools of Willamina. Husbands of club members also were invited, with about 60 present. The hostesses were Mrs. Ted Gillespie, Mrs. Rex Bissett, Mrs. Fred Gillespie and Mrs. Lyle Riggs. WCTU Meets Today WOODBURN—The Woodburn WCTU will meet Friday at 2:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. C. J. Rice on East Cleveland street. The annual Christmas box will be sent to the children's farm home at Corvallis. Those having donations are asked to leave them at the home of Mrs. Carrie Young.

Negotiate Expropriation Case

Representing the United States, Lawrence L. Lawson (left) is met in Mexico City by Gustavo P. Serrano, Mexican representative. They will negotiate on the joint agrarian claims for an indemnity settlement of properties recently expropriated in Mexico.

orders. He was then in his 60th year, and had been in the navy more than 49 years. April 17, 1851, the Virginia convention passed its order of secession, and it became necessary for Farragut, living in a Virginian city, to choose between the state and the nation. Next evening he left for the North. The navy department ordered Commander D. D. Porter to visit Farragut and sound him out. The Union cause required a leader big and brave enough to open the Mississippi. December 21, official Washington chose Farragut as the man above any other for the task; on that date ordered him to undertake the capture of New Orleans. Jan. 9, 1862, he was formally appointed to the command of the West Gulf blockading squadron. Feb. 2, 1862, Farragut sailed from Hampton Roads in the steam sloop Hartford, his flagship. Sage of Salem Speculates

"Eddie" Lewis, lessee and manager of Portland's recently opened burlesque theatre, was in the old home town Tuesday. Says the new venture is doing all right.

Something is forever peeping coyly up at us in this region. Just at present it is angieworms. Later they will go down so far that even a healthy, vigorous boy almost exhausts himself in digging one out. And usually the one he succeeds in securing is so anemic that the fish turn up their noses at it. Shortly after Christmas—unless the unexpected happens, which it may, being always more or less expected—violets will be peeping coyly up.

This earth was conceived in great wisdom. Everything has been provided to meet the requirements of the exalted in spirit, and it is probable that no world in the vast universe affords a chronic fault finders such an array of features suitable for finding fault with. Ben Tibbs is an easy-going, sunny-minded chap. I think Ben's mind is less disturbed by insignificant trifles than any other mind I have known. A clock two hours wrong gives the correct time, so far as Ben cares.

When I lived in a region where 100 days without a thaw was common to the winters I knew a species of little mouse-colored birds that came with the cold and snow and went away when it ended. We called them snow birds. It sang only one note, which of course was not a song, and it was never, so far as I observed, unhappy. Nor did it ever freeze to death. Quite a contrast to a number of robins that gathered in the statehouse grounds one winter after an inch of snow had fallen—soft, mushy, snow, almost rain. They were gathered under the spreading branches of an evergreen bush of some sort, and such profanity I never heard!

Bits for Breakfast

By R. J. HENDRICKS

(Continued From Page 6) spoke French, Italian, Spanish and Arabic. In 1826, while living in New Haven, he attended lectures of professors at Yale college and later of those at the Smithsonian Institution; he was the chief historian of the old navy.

At 21, Farragut was acting lieutenant of the brig Spark. He passed 22nd in a class of 53 in 1821; in 1822 cruised on the John Adams, and the two following years was with Commander Porter suppressing piracy in the West Indies; first ordered to the Greyhound, commanded by his brother; later, executive officer of the Sea Gull, flagship of the fleet, and for a time commander of the Ferret—his first command of a naval vessel. He learned from the tactics of the wily pirates lessons to become useful to his country in the Civil war.

A good deal of his time in the three decades preceding the Civil war, when not engaged at sea, Farragut spent at home, Norfolk, Virginia, having married March 24, 1823, and in '25 having been advanced to the rank of lieutenant. One of his first commands thereafter was on the Brandywine, which in 1825 returned Lafayette (and Bonnevillie) to France, after their great tour of the country. Lafayette had helped to make free.

He was off Brazil with the sloop Vandalla in 1829-30, at Charleston with the sloop Natchez in '33, to support the federal government in its dispute with the nullifiers; in Mexican waters on the schooner Erie 1838, to protect American interests in the trouble between France and Mexico.

That was his last sea duty in the lieutenant's grade. He was executive officer of the ship of the line Delaware at the Brazil station in 1842, and on this station was assigned to the sloop of war Decatur. In 1847 he was ordered to the command of the sloop Saratoga to help with the Mexican war. Here his familiarity with the Spanish language was valued. In 1850-52, Farragut was employed in New York and Norfolk ordnance duties, and with others drew up a book of ordnance regulations (1854), entitled "Experiments to Ascertain Strength and Endurance of Navy Guns."

"In August, 1854, he was ordered to proceed to the west coast and establish a navy yard at Mare Island, a task of considerable difficulty, and of some privations ON ACCOUNT OF PRIMITIVE LIVING CONDITIONS. While in California, on Sept. 14, 1855, he was commissioned captain. At the end of four years he returned east by way of the Isthmus of Panama, and soon after his arrival was ordered to take command of the sloop Brooklyn and proceed to Mexico; then in the throes of one of its periodical revolutions." (The quoted words (not the capital letters) are from the Dictionary of Biography.)

The winter of 1860-61 Farragut spent at Norfolk on waiting

Banquet Is Given For Football Boys

AUMSVILLE—The football players of the local high school county championships in the B league this year, were honor guests at a delightful banquet in the school dining room Tuesday night. Decorations and motifs were used carrying out the football spirit. The beautiful victory trophy was presented to the team by a representative of the Parker store in Salem. Short informal talks were given by T. P. Otto, Raymond Stevens, coach of the winning team, and by William Forgey of the local school board.
