

Decorate Tiny Cookies for Holiday

Much of the fun in making holiday cookies is their decoration, and an inexpensive sugar cookie can look like a million when dressed up a bit with chocolate or icing.

Make several batches of sugar cookies, or of molasses cookies, and cut them in as odd shapes as your imagination will allow. If sizes are too big, cut them in two. Some women even use the cuttings to provide variety in shape.

There are two classes of decoration for cookies, that which goes on before baking, and that which tops the cookies after baked. Most grocery stores carry colored sugars and candies that can be used to top cookies and which stand the heat. Brushed with egg white and dipped in the candies that have been spread in a saucer, the cookies will hold their decoration and have a slight glaze.

Silver dragees will also stand the heat and will be showy decoration. Nuts, of course, are good and can be stuck on with the egg white glaze.

For decorations to be put on cookies after baked, use melted chocolate. Heat carefully, dipping chocolate or regular cake chocolate. Whip with a fork until beginning to cool. Dip small cookies in the chocolate, down halfway, leaving the other half plain.

Or make a small cornucopia of white paper, fill it with the chocolate and make tiny drops of colored chocolate around the edge. The chocolate may be made in spirals on round cookies, criss-cross on other shapes, and even can be used to write a greeting.

Frosting can be tinted and used to decorate the cookies. A tree shape can be outlined with green icing and silver balls put on with tiny drops of the icing.

Artichokes Stuffed Good Dish
French artichokes are in markets in earnest these days but many women who like them for a hot vegetable or as salad know little about cooking this odd vegetable from the foggy valleys of California.

Artichokes taste much better when carefully cooked. Drop them into boiling water, add a half lemon, a little olive oil or cooking oil, and a handful of pickling spices. Cook until the leaves are tender when tested, and all starchiness is gone. Italians like to carefully pull the leaves back from the center of the cooked vegetable, remove the center or "choke" and fill it with a dressing made from sweet herbs and fine breadcrumbs, seasoned with garlic and moistened with olive oil.

"Dawn Patrol," Elsinore Soon

Errol Flynn and Basil Rathbone, in a tense scene from the Warner Bros. drama of wartime aviation, "The Dawn Patrol," starting Friday at the Elsinore theatre, plus on this same bill "Spring Madness," with Maureen O'Sullivan and Lew Ayres; also a Walt Disney color cartoon, "Mother Goose Goes Hollywood."

It's a mad marathon of mirth and murder; the roving reporters, Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen, are at the State theatre today. Friday and Saturday in "Time Out For Murder," co-featured with the merry mad Jones family in "Safety in Numbers."

Last Minute Gift Often Among Very Best

There are always last-minute gifts to buy, because only a superwoman could really do all her shopping ahead. Often the woman who shops late gets the best bargains, and sometimes even a better selection of small things.

Even little boys like some heman soap that is in the shape of pine cones and smacks of the woods.

Seedums and small cacti are to be found at the florists in small pots from practically nothing up. You can suit any purse and any age.

Handkerchiefs are certainly not a new gift, but always an appreciated one. Five cents up to a dollar one are found now and even the inexpensive ones have attractive color these days.

The ten-cent store will yield any number of dime gifts for a housewife. Apple corers, measuring cups, mixing spoons, salt shakers, dish rags, pot holders, and any other of the dozens of little things that will make more packages under the tree.

An assortment of canned jelly and jam from your own basement will make an excellent gift to arrange in a small basket. Just good old ginger cookies will please youngsters.

Bring Typewriter For Wrist Watch

MONMOUTH—Mrs. J. L. Nelson, whose wrist watch disappeared from her home last week, has not recovered it. A strange woman, who said she was from Salem, left a typewriter with Nelson at his service station, "in lieu of the missing watch." Asked by Mrs. Nelson what her connection was with Loren Caulkins, a prowler arrested here last week, the woman replied that she was merely a friend of his family.

Caulkins, who had been living for two weeks at Young's auto camp here, has been discovered to have a penitentiary record. He is detained in the county jail. He had entered the homes of Mrs. G. W. Chesebro and Mrs. Marion Fresh, and had been seen prowling around the Nelson home the day the place was ransacked and Mrs. Nelson's watch disappeared. State police took charge of the typewriter. It is thought Caulkins may have been connected with a ring of thieves operating in nearby towns.
