Flurry on Buying Subsides With Watchers Eyeing

Hopkins Move NEW YORK, Feb. 23-(P)-The stock market walked the tightrope today, with a faint leaning to the upside. There was a momentary run of buying as Wal Istreet studied the implications of Secretary Morgenthau' estatement the administration was out to encourage business profits and was considering tax revision.

This flurry subsided quickly, however, and the market resumed the quiet drift in evidence before the Washington's birthday

Indications the administration was planning to finance additional US defense expenditures out of borrowing, rather than extra taxation, were given an "inflationary" interpretation in some Wall street quarters. It was argued the combined effect of financing arms programs here and in Europe on credit in time would tend to raise commodity prices. Traders on Sidelines

Traders, however, seemed inclined to remain on the sidelines until they could get a closer look at spring business trends in the United States and for opportunity to see how far Secretary Hopkins would go toward a business "appeasement" policy in his widely heralded Iowa speech tomorrow The Associated Press compo
