Ladd & Bush Bankers Plan Open House March 29, Date of 70th Anniversary, Reception, Historical Exhibit Slated

The firm of Ladd & Bush, Bankers, will throw its doors open to the general public the night of March 29 for a reception in honor of the pioneer Salem bank's 70th anniversary, which occurs that day, the officers announced yesterday. The public is being invited to inspect the bank during the open house hours, 7 to 10 p. m., and view interesting exhibits of historical bank documents and other mementos of the early days in Oregon.

The bank opened for business March 29, 1869, in the first unit of the building it now occupies. Old Documents On Display

An advance exhibit was set up in a glass case in the bank lobby yesterday for the interest of visitors. Articles on display include the original cash journal, the daily balance ledger, checkbook of one of the early depositors, copies of early day newspapers such as the Oregon Spectator, the Oregon Weekly Oregonian, the Oregon Weekly Times, and Oregon Statesman, which was founded in 1851 by Asahel Bush, who was later to found the bank; a mortgage given in 1744, and a powder horn carried by Samuel Gibson in the war of 1813 and later brought across the plains to Oregon.

Double Bookkeeping Used
Work of the bank's bookkeeper was doubled in the early days of Oregon. Spectator, the Oregon Weekly Oregonian, the Oregon Weekly Times, and Oregon Statesman, which was founded in 1851 by Asahel Bush, who was later to found the bank; a mortgage given in 1744, and a powder horn carried by Samuel Gibson in the war of 1813 and later brought across the plains to Oregon.

How Little was Known
The map shows the Multnomah extending into the Rocky mountains, and falls to show the Cascade mountains. It also depicts a river extending from Great Salt Lake to San Francisco bay.

National Leader Will Visit Here

C. V. Porterfield, President of US Mortician Group to Attend Meeting

Preliminary arrangements for the annual state convention of the Oregon Funeral Directors' association, to be held in Salem June 5 to 7 this year, were discussed at last night's dinner meeting of the Central Willamette Valley association, held at the Argosy hotel.

State President Kenneth W. Holman announced that Charles V. Porterfield, of Holton, Kans., has accepted an invitation to attend the Salem convention. This will be the first time in history that a president of the national association would be the guest of any western organization.

Other Officials to Come
Holman also reported that invitations had also been accepted at the Oregon convention by Mike De Young of Stockton, Calif., Martin L. Dawson of Elmas, Wash., A. W. Davis of American Falls, Idaho and Ralph Bray of Miles City, Mont., president of California, Washington, Idaho and Montana State Funeral Directors' associations.

Dr. Frederick D. Stricker of Portland, secretary of the Oregon state board of health, was the guest of honor and spoke on the duties of state registrars in conjunction with state board of health.

Invitation to hold the next meeting in Hillsboro with the northwestern Oregon funeral directors was accepted as was an invitation to attend a state table conference in Portland on April 24.

This will be the first time the annual meeting has been held west of the mountains.

Farmers Co-op Takes Flaxseed

Final arrangements were completed yesterday for the Mid-Willamette Farmers Union Cooperative to handle flaxseed for Marion county distribution, according to word from the co-op officials.

This seed for flaxseed raising has previously been a handled through Portland only, but now the new Farmers Union co-op has tractors available to interested farmers. It is expected 1000 acres will be planted in this area this season, as this section of Oregon has the best climate for this crop.

The arrangements include a contract for some of the straw, as well as an outlet for all seed raised.

Planting should be done this month or early April, at the rate of about 50 pounds to the acre. The FU co-op is at the Ivan Stewart warehouse just north of the highway viaduct.
