No, this department hasn't gone any screwier than usual. The Squad Working above statistics are of pertinent value in use as an argument why the annual state high school basketball tournament should not be moved from Willamette university to a state school, as is a bit more than contemplated.

It is a pretty well accepted fact that independent schools, such as Willamette, operate at a lower cost per student than do the state institutions of higher education Should, for example, the University of Oregon take over the state hoop meet, and allow for it in its biennial athletic budget, it would constitute a severe blow to Willamette university.

Many such direct steals from independent schools of the nature Willamette university, and those schools would fold up like accordions. When that time comes. students now enrolled in them will of necessity be thrown on state institutions, which, as we have pointed uot, have been unable to educate them as cheaply as do the independent institutions. It would mean, in a final analysis, that Oregon's taxpayers would be asked to carry the additional load now carried in an admirable manner by Willam-ette and sister independent col-

Other Arguments.

There are other arguments for to strengthen the squad. Putnam keeping the state tournament at Willamette university, even though the Oregon State High Chapman will confine his efforts tion mark from around the Dean School Athletic association does have substantial argument for subsidizing it at a state school. 1. Tradition. It has been in Salem since its genesis, and we of the northwest country are pretty proud papas of our tradi-tions. Matty Mathews, whose invitational meets of 1917, 18, and 19 were forerunners of the all-state affair that opened in 1920, was in attendance at last Saturday night's finale of the 1939 tourney—22 years after he instigated it.

2. Central location. Salem and Willamette university are about as centrally located for the meet as is possible.

3. Drawing power. There is hardly any question but what the meet here will outdraw the same meet held in either Eugene or Corvallis. Salem, and immediate surroundings, is in itself much more heavily populated, and in addition is close enough to Portland to drag in Rose City fans when and if its schools are brought back into the fold.

Must "Put out."

however, Willamette university and the city of Salem expect to keep the traditional meet, this department again wishes to emphasize the necessity of "putting out" for it. Willamette university can't hope to compete with state schools Justin Weakley, Camas; Rex Putin the matter of facilities. The more modern equipment in use at state institutions is probably one reason why the cost per year per student at them is higher than at Willamette and sister independent

But, Willamette-if properly assisted by the city of Salem, can most assuredly do better than it has done. Whether it was Willamette university or the OSHSAA that was directly at fault for a host of little things that detracted from this year's meet, I am not certain. But, whichever it was, it should be soundly criticized.

For instance: 1. The old, ragged nets, that were in use on the baskets throughout Willamette's regular season, were left on the baskets for the state tournament. A set of new nets would have cost not more than 60 cents. 2. Antique time clocks were used, the timer's gun fired only when it took a notion, and even the scorer's whistle refused to operate in at least two instances. 3. Paint came off the bleacher seats on the clothing of patrons,

(and the author of this can vouch that it did by a cleaning bill for getting a gob of said paint on his trousers), and the railing along the press box was covered with pitch, (for which we have a pitchstained coat sleeve to offer as ex-

4. End - of - the-court bleachers were much too close to the playing floor, making a tangle of legs that protruded out into the playing area under the baskets.

Expect the Best.

Most of the 16 teams, that were and defeated the Angels, 9 to 3, lamette at Salem May 19. here for last week's 20th annual tournament, are accustomed to far better facilities right in their own home burgs than they encountered while here. They have sparkling Sacramento new courts, up-to-date timing devices that operate automatically. and seating arrangements that do

Tournament teams have the right to expect the very best when congregating for the annual meet, which is one of the larger sports event of the year for the state, and have a right to feel disgruntand Mrs. Cheste: Jerman and a

A conscientious move was made by Willamette university, the OSHSAA and a group of Sa-lem business men, to improve tournament facilities in Salem. They drew up a bill, to be introduced into the 66 day legislature, that would allow the State High School Athletic association the use of the horse show building at the state fair-
