NEW YORK, April 7 .- (A)-Stock exchange traders faced the Cranges, crate Easter eve session with uncertainty today, as European developments continued disturbing.

Normally at this time, psychological effects of a market lag are more than countered by the usual optimistic predictions of seasonal upturn.

Today, however, there was little to engender enthusiasm except the very severity of the market's fall in recent sessions. The stock market was closed for Good Friday, but will reopen tomorrow, a lt hough European exchanges

"The Forgotten Fleet Mystery'

by VAN WYCK MASON

On a wharf in Patuxtown, Maryland, ex-Colonel Donald Colby, late A.D.C. to General Gonzalo Gutierrez, beats up Tod Ferguson, burly oysterman, for insulting Geneva Benet, daughter of Capt. Benet of the "Amerika." Ferguson was fired by Benet and infers someone was murdered on the ship. Later, Geneva confides in Colby that she had brought two men from "Why?" Leonardtown to work for her father. "They were afraid to stay but you wouldn't be," she says. A new look creeps into Colby's eyes. "Young lady," he demanded crisply, "shall we talk?"

"Why?"

Her voice sank to a dull monotone that nevertheless filled the dreary waiting room. "We haven't a cent beside what the Shipping Board pays him. Father is an old war and the same talk?"

Somewhere high above, a full moon was fighting to pierce the mist and only succeeded in creating a curious milky atmosphere; the effect was ghostly, almost unreal, Colby realized. "Here we are "Here

"You," abruptly observed Donald Colby, "are not from Patuxtown sor even from Maryland."

"What makes you think so?"

"Shoes." His face darkened, as f old ghosts were coming out of aiding. Used to know people who were shoes like that—and suits ailored like yours. Where are you tailored like yours. Where are you from?"

"If I were to ask you the same question," countered the girl evenly, "would you answer?"

"No." He saw before him a girl who was strikingly beautiful though mot the pretty-pretty type—her wide mouth precluded that. There was a muscular adequacy to her figure which was sublimated to wholly feminine curves. She wore a dark brown cloche, the brim of which was pulled down to a level of wide and sweeping brows. Who or what had drawn those tense, strained lines about her eyes and mouth? What was this gray-eyed girl in those ence smart tweeds doing in such a dreary backwater of Chesapeake Bay? She had, he decided, the alert and earnest look of one who has set a difficult goal and who proposes, come what may, to reach it.

By the orange-yellow glare of the single thirty watt bulb, Geneva Benet saw before her a tall, broadshouldered young man who might have been thirty, but who probably
