

150 Cinder Men Here for Field Meet

Perhaps my scope is too broad—the left rear one, but I believe Leo "The Lion" Turner could become middleweight champion of the world under proper management and care.

To make such a statement, when all Turner has done to date has been to bowl over a handful of third and fourth-rate pug-nuglies, indeed sounds crazy—but anyone who writes about fighters in a bit balmy way.

However, when you stop to realize that Turner is but 19 years old—and the proper method for arriving at such a realization is to start with the figure zero (0) and count by twos until you come to 18 and add one (1), or ask his mother, you've got something there.

What you have is 151 pounds of fleet negro, unbelievably swift, who can hit from any position, with either hand, and with effect. Or perhaps I should say, with dispatch. You have as trim a fighting figure as there is in existence anywhere, and I mean anywhere. His liddle, whose expressionless countenance has yet to be creased with the scord scars of battle despite a long string of amateur scraps and some eight or ten professional meetings.

"The Lion," (who is far more tigerish than lionish but who was tagged with the lion monicker because his first name happened to be Leo), has one severe handicap. He isn't heavy enough for the full-fledged middleweights, the 155 and 160-pounders, and can't make the 147-pound top of the welter division. Each of the four boys he has fought here so far has been right at his own weight, and he has yet to meet a top weight middle.

Needs Caretaker. The battering chocolate drop stands to gain five or six pounds before he reaches his majority, however, which would put him at his peak in weights, experience and age all at the same time. Providing he gets the proper management and care until that time, your correspondent sincerely believes he'll be the sensation of the middleweight division.

But there you have it: He must have the right attention. "Someone, (and, brother, it isn't going to be me for I've got my golf to attend to), will have to doggone near live with that dusky cyclone. The gent who takes Mistah Tunah in tow, with the sole idea of carrying him to the top, will have to feed him, put him to bed, pick his spots and nurse him life he was at only child.

Give most negroes a little cash and they'll cram anything in their stomachs. Neither Turner nor Joe Louis is an exception. After two of his tussles here Turner loaded up on hamburgers and chocolate candy, and when I say loaded I mean three hamburgers and a buck's worth of candy bars. About one year of such indulgence and the first time Mistah Tunah's tummy is the recipient of a solid blow his toes will turn up like a taxi dancer's.

To be repetitious, I dislike going overboard for a bozo who has yet to prove himself in capable company. But if ever a youngster had more natural ability to go places in the pugilistic profession than Turner he must have been born with his dukes enclosed in padded leather.

Proctor, Hopper Show Well. Turner is under contract to Tex Salkeld, longtime Portland promoter and matchmaker. Salkeld has handled a lot of fighters, none of whom has set the world on fire. He'll probably never get a better looking prospect than Turner, and it is to be hoped that he takes care of the little bit of black lightning—the type of care a mother gives her baby.

It was apparent at Wednesday night's fight program, in the main event of which Turner stopped "Puncher" Portlow in two minutes and 10 seconds, that Turner is not the only talented tesser of mitts hereabouts. Two other lads stood out like hoop kirts. One was another negro, 17-year-old Powder Proctor, and the other was Curley Hopper, the Creek Indian from Oklahoma.

Proctor worked smoothly for one of such tender age, although he had little more than a dummy at which to fire in rambler's Rambeau, while Hopper gave the best demonstration of counter-punching seen here this year.

If Farmer Friend, the VFW matchmaker, can keep Turner, Proctor and Hopper working steadily here, and if he could add to them with Keller Wagner, the amateur heavyweight who's yet hasn't turned pro, and ditto John Cobell, the wild warhopper from Chemawa who won the state AAU 160-pound title, the fight game has a definite future here. Providing, of course, that such stinko stuff as the Hibbard-Bennett fiasco is kept pickled in somebody's mind only.

It was an excellent card Wednesday night. It drew better than an average crowd, and if the scraps are kept on that plane the turnouts will get better.

OCE Beaten Second Time by 10 to 3; McAlbee Is Smooth in Debut

MONMOUTH—Willamette's big batting guns fired a 15-hit barrage at two Oregon College of Education pitchers here Thursday, and the Beacrats pounded out an easy 10 to 3 victory.

It was Willamette's second straight win this season over the Teachers, achieved behind the smooth pitching of Rookie Harold McAlbee and Veteran Bill Anton.

McAlbee, making his collegiate debut, pitched for six innings before tiring, Anton, rapidly becoming Coach "Spec" Keene's team work horse, allowed the Wolves only one hit in the final three frames.

The game was a tight pitcher's duel until Willamette broke out with a five-run rally in the seventh. The score was tied, 2-2, at the time.

Tight Duel for Six Willamette got away to an early start, scoring one in the opening frame as Catherwood, Kolb and Gentzkow singled. Another Bearcat tally crossed in the fourth on a two-base error and Gentzkow's second successive base hit.

The Teacher-Wolves got one back in the fourth when O'Connell's pop fly fell safely between Gentzkow and Southard for two bases. Ellingsworth was safe on a fielder's choice and Charles' single.

Ellingsworth tied the score in the sixth when his single to right-center took a bad bounce and rolled away for a home run. Willamette polished off Cereghino in the big seventh. Dispensiere opened with a single, moved up on a sacrifice and scored as Anton, pinch hitting for McAlbee, slapped a single to left, to score what proved to be the winning run.

Catherwood also singled. White was safe on an error, Shinn singled and Southard tripled to deep left. Miller replaced Cereghino at this point and retired the side, but a walk, Dispensiere's triple, Moe's double and Anton's second successive single, scored three more Bearcat runs in the eighth.

Experiments Cause 7 Errors Coach Keene experimented considerably with his lineup, and with a none too smooth infield, and a grand total of 13 errors were committed, seven by the Bearcats.

Angels Homer Defeats Sacs

All 2 to 1 Scoring Is Driven in Pair of Circuit Swats

LOS ANGELES, April 27.—(AP)—A home run by Johnny Moore in the last of the ninth with Charley English on base gave Los Angeles a 2 to 1 victory over Sacramento today.

It was strictly a game of home runs, as Dibs Williams' circuit smash over the center field wall at Wrigley field in the sixth was the only score of the game until Moore's wallop decided the issue.

Bill Schmidt, Sacramento hurler, had extended to 17 the number of innings he had blanked the opposition, when Moore stopped him. Julio Bonetti, Angel hurler, matched Schmidt's effective mound work but did not get credit for the victory, as he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the last of the eighth and "Jittery Joe" Berry took over the hurling duties in the ninth.

Sacramento 1 6 0 Los Angeles 2 7 1 Schmidt and Odrogowski; Bonetti, Berry and R. Collins.

Carley Gehring's seventh inning homer off Jack Knott was the only Detroit tally as Knott and Clint Brown scattered nine hits and the latter was aided by four fast double plays in the last six innings, two of them started by himself.
