Air Stocks up 2 Points in Forenoon but Drop Back Later

NEW YORK, April 27-(AP)-F1nancial markets exhibited a calm and fairly confident spirit today despite the heavy ring of question marks surrounding the Hitler speech before the Reichstag tomorrow in answer to the Roosevelt peace plea.

Led by aircrafts, stocks moved up fractions to 2 points in the forenoon, subsequently retreated and revived at the last under a fair-sized amount of buying in motors.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was up .40 of a point at 44.6. Transfers totaled 537,900 shares against 584,260 the day before.

Interest in the feuhrer's address, scheduled for around 3 a.m., Pacific time, was stressed by the announcement a number of brokerage offices would open at this time so customers could place quick orders through European markets which are five hours or so ahead of the American metropolitan center.

CHAPTER II

Abysmally depressed, Ginger gravitated toward Bryant Park, where at length she found a bench Oblivious to the admiring impact of eruising masculine stares, she tried to think a way out of her predica-ment, but with little success. It looked as if O'Riley was right about her career, if she could not get to Miami. She would have to take any kind of job at all, soon, simply to be able to eat. Her spirits sank perceptibly lower at the thought.

A man sitting on the other end of the bench, who had hitherto been sorbed in an evening paper, put it down on the seat between them, and walked off. Ginger picked it up. She might just as well be finding that job now as later.

She glanced idly at page one first, from force of habit rather than interest. Kings might abdicate, floods in China kill millions, tragedy stalk the air lanes, even movie stars shoot their husbands; these abstractions were of little moment beside the reality of a setback in her career and the persecution of a crooner

"BONKHEER DIAMOND STOLEN IN BROAD DAYLIGHT"

Ginger scanned the sub-headlines beneath, not because she was particularly interested, at the moment, but because, being American, she did not want to miss anything.

The famous Benkheer Diamond, one of the largest uncut diamonds in the world, which, recently discovered, had been brought to New York in the hope of selling it to some multi-millionaire, had been stolen that afternoon from the case in which it was on exhibition in the Fifth Avenue shop of one of the metropolis's most prominent jewelera. It was a pure white stone, Ginger gathered, and worth a quarter of a million dollara. Her skimming eyes caught phrases: "International that already filled his car? Supposyes caught phrases: "International ing of jewel thieves suspected," police dragnet out," "most brazen jewel theft of the century."

Ginger shrugged her shoulders, as the impatiently began to turn the pages, looking for the classified addiamonds in the world, at the moment, for the price of a bus fare to Miami. She reached the section ahe sought and began intently to peruse the columns.

Her questing glance fell first on ida." She hesitated. "Are you go-

The headline screamed: "Bonkheer Diamond Stolen in Broad Daylight."

Hurrying to the nearest telephone booth, she rang the number given in the advertisement, her heart in her mouth. Supposing this Taylor party had already filled his car? Supposing she were too late?

The ringing stopped, and a masculine voice answered. "Hello?"

May I speak to Mr. "This is Tony Taylor," said the voice, amiably.

She swallowed hard.
