Wave of Short Covering Is Factor in Unusual Boost in Week

carried the market to its best level since early last summer, establishing new high values for al 1939 wheat contracts.

short covering and stop loss purchasing. Heavy profit taking pared the gains just before the close, however.

Absence of moisture relief in dry sections of the winter wheat belt over the weekend and a forecast giving little promise of rain in the near future were important factors. With no indications of early deliveries of wheat on May contracts, dealers who have sold short covered their positions, which accounted partly for the outstanding strength of the delivery. Contracts remaining to be settled this month either by delivery of wheat or trading in the pit involve 12,000,000 bushels, having been reduced 8,000,000 the past week.

Wheat closed %-1% cents higher than Saturday, May 75-74%, July 73-72%.

Liverpool wheat closed %-1% cents higher, with export business estimated in excess of 500,000 bushels, els, including some domestic hard grain.
