FLAKES

Isn't it the truth? This youthful mother does very well in her own way and finds that a simply tailored silk frock stands the strain without complaint and makes a smart appearance when guests arrive. A dark green dot on a bright green ground, it sips all down the front and has three sets of skirt pleats to balance three rows of tucking on the bodice. A dressier print, right, with radiating pleats for bodice fullness, is topped with a fitted simple coat.—Copyright, 1939, Esquire Features, Inc.
