Dairymen Hold Annual Picnic

Metzger Says Dairy Field Should Interest More Consumers

Opportunities of the dairymen in dairy products and in stressing higher quality cream for producing the best grade of butter, A. W. Metzger, state dairy and food commissioner, told nearly 500 Willamette valley persons gathered at the picnic of the Salem unit of Rural Green party headquarters at Hazel Green park Sunday.

Metzger said that with dairy products of the southern states now competing for places on the market, the general price situation does not look too encouraging.

He mentioned observance of national dairy month and showed how all branches of the dairy industry are cooperating to put the cow before the public and to give the consumers more information about benefits of using dairy products rather than substitutes.

The dairymen's part in the campaign should be three-fold, he said, first, continual working toward quality improvement; second, consumption of more dairy products at home; and third, taking advantage of the assistance offered by the state department of agriculture in the dairy quality improvement campaign it has ever launched.
