

Brewers Fight With Truckers

Jurisdictional Dispute Is Waged in Court Over Organizing Right

WASHINGTON, June 22—(AP)—AFL teamsters and brewery workers unions, battling in court to determine which has the right to organize brewery truck drivers, prepared today to call for the testimony of Matthew Woll, AFL vice president, and Dave Beck, head of the teamsters union in Seattle.

The labor leaders were expected to testify regarding AFL jurisdiction rulings which led to a decision at the 1933 AFL convention that the teamsters union had jurisdiction over the drivers.

The legal fight between the unions is underway in the United States district court, with the brewery workers seeking to enjoin AFL officers from carrying out the convention decision.

Henry Ivers of Seattle, attorney for the Northwest Association of Brewers, testified today that the association was willing to contract with whichever union the AFL ruled had jurisdiction to the long dispute.

Frank Morrison, AFL secretary-treasurer, also was on the stand, identifying exhibits of documents and records relating to the long dispute.

Relates Decisions

In his capacity as secretary of the AFL executive council and all AFL conventions, Morrison was called on by federation attorneys to relate decisions the AFL has made with respect to other affiliates involved in jurisdictional fights.

In the course of the hearing, attorneys for the brewery workers union produced testimony of John J. Keegan, Portland, Ore., captain of detectives, to describe how rivalry between teamsters and brewery workers culminated in the Portland "beer war" of 1935.

Wrong Guess, but Everybody's Happy

Sidney A. Fortel, who made news by coming right out and saying that the stork was headed for his house with a boy, and who even named the date the bird would arrive, is shown here with his wife and their new-daughter, Fortel, who foretold the sex wrong and missed the date two days, is still glad to welcome Hazel Ann, and says that next time he'll hit it right on the nose, when the stork again heads for their home in Newark, N. J.

Opportunity for Youth Is Offered

Research Library Is Made Available, Employees Helped to Learn

The employees of the Fred Meyer organization are encouraged in every way to avail themselves of the educational facilities afforded by the firm. A complete research and educational library is maintained with a full time librarian and research adviser, to select books in the merchandising world that will be beneficial to the employee.

In addition to this the young men and women in the organization are encouraged to attend various extension classes on salesmanship, accounting, advertising, public speaking and other subjects pertaining to business, and if they obtain a passing grade they receive the full course absolutely free.

The Fred Meyer policy is to promote within the ranks, and a check of the managerial staff will prove that the young men and women in executive positions today, are ones that have worked in the stores and learned the business the practical way. All work and no play they say, makes things a little dull, so the organization sees that this factor is taken into consideration, and affords entertainment in the form of parties, dances, banquets, picnics and other festivities at which the employee families gather to play and have a good time.

Several employees' clubs function in the organization each playing an important part in the activities of the employees. One, the Gold Star club, an organization composed of and headed

Mounties on Way To Treasure Isle

SPOKANE, June 22—(AP)—The redcoats arrived today, conquered Spokane, and vanished into the west tonight in triumph.

They were Royal Canadian mounted policemen, 32 strong, en route to the Golden Gate exposition at San Francisco, and their stop here was—officially—to exercise their 35 horses. Lieut-Col. T. Hill Irvine was in command.

The vividly garbed troop, which escorted King George and Queen Elizabeth while their majesties were in the west, took time to gallop the mounts around a stockyard corral this afternoon.

The men were guests this evening at a special parade of the United States fourth infantry at Fort George Wright, then banqueted with the Spokane Polo club before catching a train for Portland.

Settle Mine Case Outside of Court

MEDFORD, June 22—(AP)—An out-of-court settlement caused dismissal today of the $309,000 accounting suit of the Most Rev. Francis J. Beckman, archbishop of Dubuque, Iowa, against Philip Suetter and others.

Circuit Judge H. D. Horton also ordered an injunction against Suetter vacated.

Dictators Advised To Go on a Hike

VANCOUVER, B.C., June 22—(CP)—Miss Nancy Jane Reasoner, field worker for American youth hostels, today told the Canadian physical education convention here that if the world's dictators would "go swinging through the forests with knapsacks on their backs they would find the solution to international problems."

She said the practical aims of the movement were international, recreational and educational, the most significant of all being promotion of international goodwill and understanding of young people in many different countries.

A. C. Pelton, director of physical education in Seattle, told the delegates that boys and girls "develop not by cramming but by doing, for in doing they increase their mental capacity to think and reason."

Wheat Benefits Nearly Million

CORVALLIS, June 22—(AP)—The AAA has paid wheat parity benefits amounting to $973,376 to 3237 Oregon applicants, N. C. Donaldson, state executive officer, revealed today. Total payments will run about $1,400,000.

Adjustments were granted farmers who maintained acreage restrictions specified by the department of agriculture to bring the ratio of farm income and expense closer to the 1909-14 parity period.
