casian to trade myself off. But, if I were one of the republicans, I would see that the bill did not pass."

Republicans Will "Fight to End"
Senator Townsend (R-DeI), "the only republican member of the senate conference committee, declined to say there would be a filibuster, but did assert in emphatic tones that the republicans would "fight it to the end."

The arrangement was voted at a hurry-call meeting summoned after it was learned that if action were to be taken in the house tomorrow, the conference report had to be filed before that body adjourned tonight.

Early in the day, Morgenthau, pacing nervously and unsmilingly back and forth behind his desk, told reporters that if the stabilization fund and the devaluation power lapse tomorrow, America "better start worrying about the dollar." The dollar had been held stable since 1934, he said, but it was impossible to tell what would happen without the powers involved.

The administration, he said, might stop its purchases of domestic silver temporarily tomorrow night if the monetary bill were still tied up. Meanwhile, he added, the treasury is adjusting the price it pays for foreign silver to quotations on the London market. It was out again for the third time today, to 35 cents. On Monday it was 4...

to settlement" of east economic claims, and added:

"It is impossible to negotiate with a government whose responsible spokesmen brand a friendly country as thieves and blackmailers and indulge in daily monstrous slanders on British policy."

The speech was delivered at the annual dinner of the Royal Institute of International Affairs and was broadcast both here and abroad—including the United States—and was summarized on the British Broadcasting corporation's nightly German language broadcast.

Speaking of British guarantees to Poland, Rumania, Greece and Turkey, Lord Halifax said: "We have assumed obligations and are preparing to assume more with a full understanding of their causes and with a full understanding of the consequences."

"We know that if security and independence of other countries are to disappear, our own security and our own independence will be gravely threatened. We know that if international law and order is to be preserved we must be prepared to fight in its defense."

In this connection he mentioned negotiations now under way in Moscow on the proposed British-French-Soviet Russian mutual assistance pact, saying "I hope there may very shortly be a successful issue." Sources close to the govern-

Early Deliveries Hit by Physician

DALLAS, Tex., June 29.—(AP)—The delivery of babies by artificial means to suit the convenience of physicians was criticized by Dr. Asa Willard of Missoula, Mont., in an address at the American Osteopathic association convention here today.

Bringing "streamlined babies" with the aid of forceps, medicine or anaesthetics prior to the time of normal birth may result in pelvic cancer and can otherwise in-

Writer of Novels Dies While Asleep

Creator of "Ruggles of Red Gap" Passes at Age of 72

MONTEREY, Calif., June 29.—(AP)—Harry Leon Wilson, 72, for four decades a writer of popular humorous books and short stories, was found dead in bed today at his Carmel Highlands home.

The housekeeper found the body. Wilson, ill for several years as the result of an auto accident which kept him from writing, apparently had died last night while asleep.

The author, born at Oregon, Ill., left school at 17 to go to California where he became a stenographer to the chief engineer of the Union Pacific railroad.

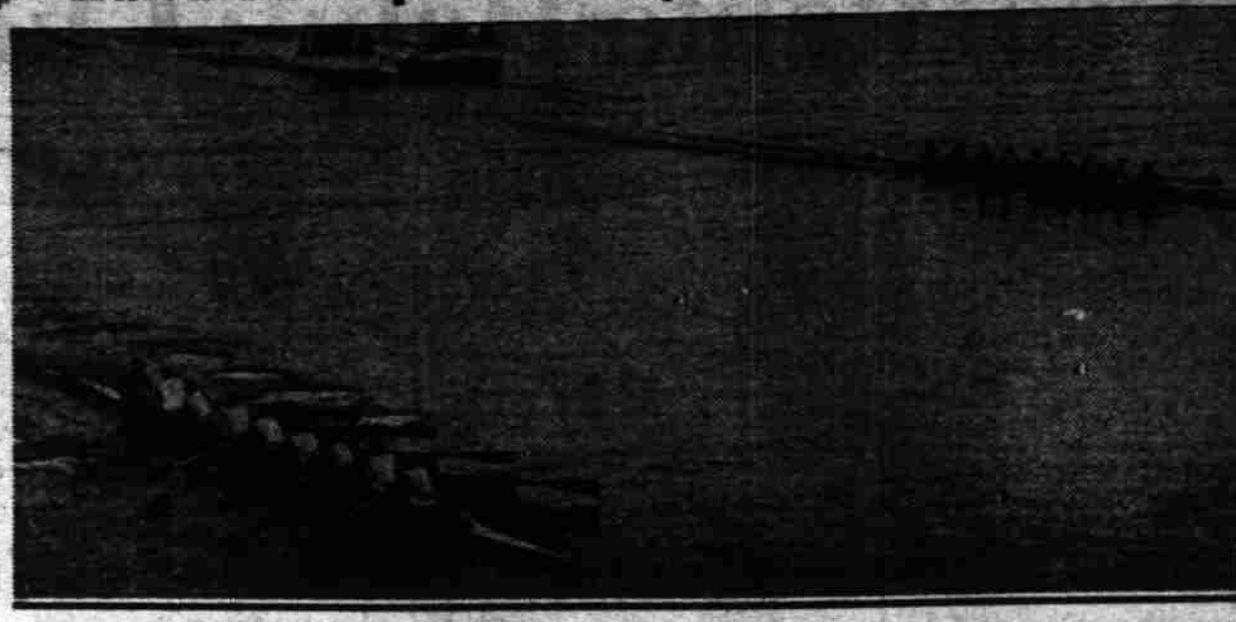

A piece published in Puck in his early twenties launched him on a writing career. He joined Puck in 1892 as associate editor and became editor in 1896, the year he also published his first book, Zig Zag Tales.

The humorist was said to have been the first to apply the term "flapper" to the American girl of the gay twenties.

Some of Wilson's books were Merton of the Movies, Ruggles of Red Gap and The Spender, the latter a novel of New York life. He also was co-author with Booth Tarkington of The Man From Home, a play which ran for six years after it became a hit in 1907.

He said the mother's health, he said, "Relief of pain may be desirable in child birth but there are many factors other than just stopping discomfort to be considered. Certainly a great deal of later trouble among mothers is traceable to this 'streamlined' method of delivery," he said.

ditions, will meet the army's most urgent needs in the next two years, General Craig said. He contended, however, that the additional measures were necessary to assure national security.

Reporting that the general staff in the last year had made a complete reappraisal of defense needs, he added that this was not due to any international crisis, but was merely "overdue from the standpoint of new and increasing strategic considerations."

"It is simple common sense for the country to determine upon and maintain at a constant level a sound, reasonably constructed army as a matter of pure economy and safety," Craig said. Aside from the expanded air

Photos of Cavern Mailed to Museum

GALLUP, N.M., June 29.—(AP)—Dr. William A. Gardner, of New York, leader of a party which this week discovered the Yel cave, once sacred shrine of the Navajos, said today he was sending photographs of the cave's interior to the American Museum of Natural History to interest scientists in his find.

Dr. Gardner and Sam Das, veteran wanderer of the Navajo country, and John Hubbell, son of Roman Hubbell, Lidian trader, found the cave near Round Rock, Ariz.

They declined to give the cave's exact location, explaining that paintings found on the cave's walls and images in the cavern were sacred to the Indians, whose legends describe how their gods, the Yel, used to meet in its huge chambers and leave images and paintings for the tribe. The cave's location was learned by Day after years of close friendship with the Navajos.
