

Oregon Held Safe From Veniaminof

PORTLAND, Ore., June 29.—(AP)—Geologically, the influence of Mount Veniaminof, Alaska's active volcano, does not extend as far as Oregon and there is little chance earthquakes in this section will follow the disturbance.

So said Dr. Laurence McKinley Gould, professor of geology at Carlton college, Northfield, Minn., today, Gould was second in command of Admiral Byrd's first antarctic expedition.

"The whole fringe of the Pacific coast is geologically unstable," he said, "but the fact that a volcano up in Alaska has gone on a violent spree is no sign that there will be any trouble far away."

Miller B. Hayden Returns to Court

Judge Miller B. Hayden of Salem justice court returned to his duties yesterday bearing the personal greeting of Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the pension movement at whose annual convention Hayden was a delegate in Indianapolis last week.

From a chance meeting with the pension leader on their eastward bound train, Hayden became acquainted with him and enjoyed a two-hour personal interview, he reported. He found the Townsend clubs' founder active physically despite his more than 70 years, and busily giving personal attention to the correspondence and other affairs of his organization.

Hayden said the convention sessions were attended by more than 15,000 persons.

Darwin Code Held Ills Cure

Scientist Suggests World Accept Man's Foibles and Curb Abuses

By RENNIE TAYLOR
PALO ALTO, Calif., June 29.—(AP)—Substitution of the Darwinian code of morals for the Christian and other "authoritarian" rules of life was advocated by a scientist as a new approach to some of the world's human welfare problems.

The suggestion was made by Dr. S. J. Holmes, zoologist, educator and author, in his presidential address to a divisional convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The Darwinian code, an outgrowth of Charles Darwin's theory that man descended from some ape-like creature, accepts cruelty, lust, deceit, cowardice and selfishness as "intrinsic" virtues, Dr. Holmes said, but disapproves their abuse.

Man Must Adjust Self
It holds that man's welfare and survival are dependent upon the extent to which he follows the laws of nature and adjusts himself to his surroundings, doing things for the good of this group and helping to protect it against its enemies.

"Man's traits, insofar as they are a part of his inheritance, owe their origin and biological meaning to their survival value," Dr. Holmes said. "... all natural traits and impulses of human beings must therefore be fundamentally good if we consider the good as the biologically useful."

"Cruelty, selfishness, lust, cowardice and deceit are normal ingredients of human nature which have their useful role in the struggle for existence. Intrinsicly they are all virtues. It is only their excess or their exercise under the wrong conditions that justify incurs our moral disapproval."

Dr. Holmes cited the ancient Hebrew laws and the Christian ordinances as examples of "authoritarian" codes and suggested such philosophies conflicted with human nature and therefore were responsible for some of the world's human welfare problems.
