peared. The accompanist struck rippling chords on the piano. Toni went into an old French chanson. Then the second gown. The sec-end wig. Another song. Then came the third, most difficult test.

For this final costume was unwieldy. And even more so was its accompanying headpiece! For set on the wig, in amusing fashion, was a miniature farmyard, no less! A tiny duck pond fash-ioned from a bit of mirror, tiny toy ducks, cows, a donkey, sheep, a little barn, and a dairymaid. Thus weighted, Niklas com-manded her to sweep elegantly from manded her to sweep elegantly from the balcony down on a winding flight of stairs that led to the main floor. There must be no teetering, no stumbling. "You are the chate-laine, receiving your guests!" Over and over, this last test was Over and over, this last test was made. "Thank heaven," thought Toni, "for old mam'selle back home who used to make me walk the nursery with a book on my head!" "And this time you will please sing as you descend," called Niklas from the orchestra dais. Three men, presumably associates of his, had entered the club.
