Bean Sketches Office's Work

State Utilities Leader Is Speaker at Lions Club, Work Is Described

Ormond B. Bean, recently appointed public utilities commissioner, was the main speaker on the program at the Lions club luncheon yesterday noon at the Marion hotel. This was the first address which Bean has given in Salem since taking office in June.

In discussing the general topic of the meaning of the public utilities commission to the people of Oregon, he began with a brief sketch of utilities regulation in Oregon from its beginning in 1887 with a commission for regulation of the railroads down to the present utilities commission law of 1931.

"Until 1931," he indicated, "the commission had a quasi-judicial function. Since then it has been constituted to serve as an advocate of the people in administering regulatory laws."

Duties Regulatory
Bean described the jurisdiction of the commission as strictly in the sphere of regulation. Its only significant taxing powers, beyond what is necessary for its own support, he emphasized, are exercised on motor transport utilities alone, and the proceeds devoted exclusively to road construction and improvement as strictly in the public interest.

The policy of the commission Bean declared to be to serve the common interest in all fairness, and to make restrictions on private enterprise rest as easily as possible. He spoke briefly of difficulties with would-be evaders of regulatory statutes.

Prior to the commissioner's address, Ben W. Carpenter of the national Red Cross spoke briefly on the reduction of swimming deaths through more adequate instruction in water sports.
