

Banquet Will Honor Past Presidents

An event of convention week greatly anticipated by every president and past president of the 194 units of the Oregon Auxiliary to the American Legion is the dinner to be held at 6:30 the opening night of the session August 10, in the "Mirror" room of the Marion hotel. It is expected that approximately 300 guests will be seated at the banquet, at which Mrs. Frank N. Waters, past national department president and acting commission for Oregon, will preside.

Young Artist Successful in East

By MAXINE BUREN
"Art Center Notes" have appeared frequently on these pages. Now we feature "Art Center Headlines," because a former student at the center has made the headlines in eastern papers.

Of Byron Randall, local boy who went east to seek his fortune as an artist, only two months ago, the Washington (DC) Daily News says "For the past month, art circles have buzzed with the name of Byron Randall, a watercolorist unknown even to those in the know. And the owner of the Whyte Gallery is buying up the work of this strange dark horse who, as the incredulous lady put it, is 'only 20' and 'from Oregon of all places!'"

The story of Byron Randall sounds like the melodramatic theme of an Alger book. As an ordinary boy he worked at the cannery, service station and was cook at the county jail. But when studying at the Salem Art Center he found the sympathy and encouragement that small cities seldom have for young artists. Almost overnight his talents blossomed, he believed he had a future as an artist—so Randall went east.

With introductory letters he showed his work in San Francisco, then Washington, DC, where the owner of the Whyte galleries viewed them. "I began," says Whyte in the Daily News story, "halfheartedly to look in routine fashion but soon realized that there was something fresh in every picture, a genuine personality."

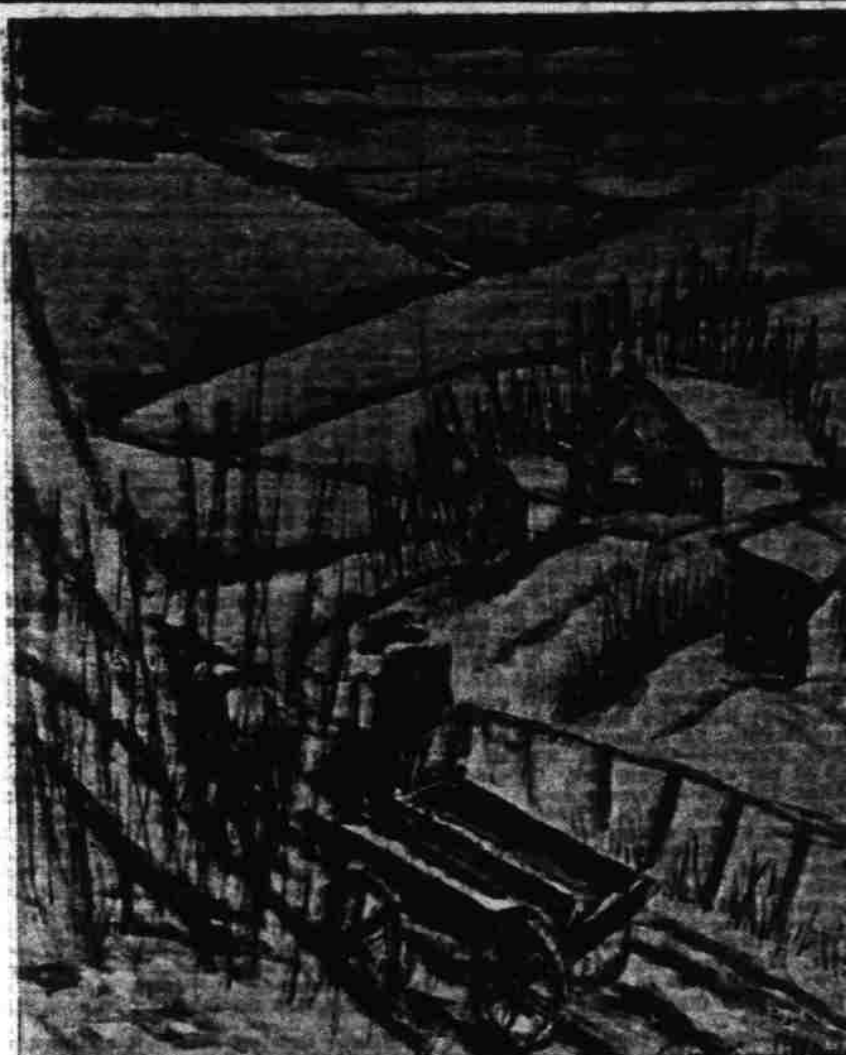

In half an hour he had bought 33 paintings and had promised young Randall an exhibition in October. Byron Randall made Whyte his sole agent, who gives a monthly "stipend" which will permit him to spend all his time painting.

"Since then," says The News, "artists and critics and collectors who have seen his work have been astonished by its vigor and originality. It has an intensity of passion and explosive violence which seemed to constitute a protest, yet without the 'impossible to live with' quality. Its emotional power is strong enough to obliterate design, but the design is unusually sound and always original. Its variety seems infinite. His paintings of New York which he is seeing now for the first time are more controlled and have an almost intellectual balance."

That's what art critics of the east think of this Salem boy. While it is not the policy of the Salem Art Center to train professional artists, it is the policy to encourage serious art students and to try to see and sponsor talent. Many months ago when the Center was young, Val Clear wrote the following: "If one good artist is discovered in the community, it will be worth all the work of the Center."

During an exhibition of his work in January at the Art Center, Clear and other members of his staff had no hesitation in insisting that he was a promising art student and that his watercolors ranked among the very best being done in this country.

Because so many persons have asked to see Byron Randall's paintings, a special exhibit is being arranged to open next Monday. These are paintings owned locally, none of the 60 pounds taken east with him. And 50 pounds of watercolors are a FEW watercolors!

Mrs. Charles E. Moyer of Omaha is visiting at the home of her brother, Mr. D. J. Richards on south High street.

Mrs. Moyer, when associated with her husband in business, was voted Omaha's best business woman.

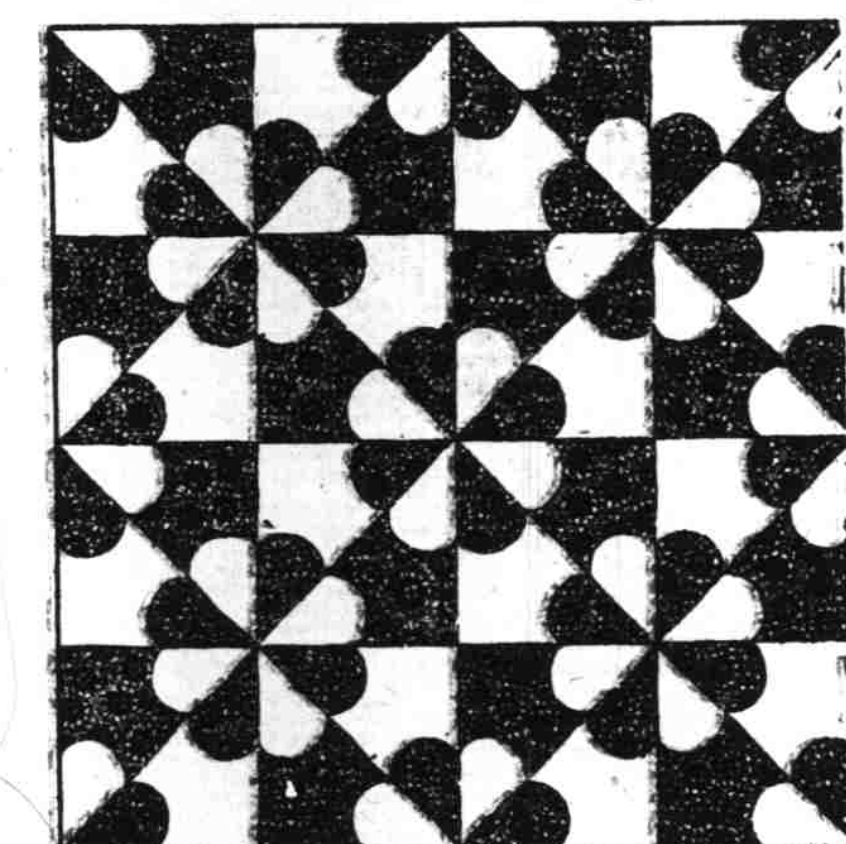

Enroute Mrs. Moyer visited in Los Angeles and attended the world's fair at San Francisco. Many affairs are being planned for her while here.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson, Jr., and daughter, Judith of Portland are weekend guests in Salem.

Style - Smiles - - - by Gratchen

"Lazy? Why he even chose a snub-nosed girl because she's easier to kiss!" The gal conserving her own energy over a lemonade is clad in a navy sheer dress. Inside tucks form a yoke and contribute bodice fullness while a high waist seam gives a flat effect at the diaphragm. Right, the shirt waist makes an appearance for afternoon, in sheer black crepe. It is casually open at the throat, with white buttons to match the white turban and gloves. The sleeves are long and full.

DALLIES—Circle "A" of the First Presbyterian church was entertained at the home of Mrs. Walter Muir on Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Joe Plummer presided at a business meeting. Mrs. Joe Plummer and Mrs. Carl Swanson assisted the hostess in serving.
