Well Surprises—Herman Mack's well in the Brush College district is furnishing him and the driller, R. A. West, with plenty of surprises. The old well of 28 feet was pushed down to 157 feet, water poured out copiously, and it was discovered it had become artesian, a novelty in these parts. Yesterday it was found water still flowed out of added casing 11 feet above the surface doing away with any need of pumps and allowing Mack to install a storage tank sometime in the future if he desires.

Trustees Maintain Home at Turner Charitable Institution

The Turner Memorial Home, trustee under the will of Cornelia A. Davis for the old Judith Turner Memorial home, yesterday requested the county court to make the property of its charge exempt from taxation as a charitable institution. The court took the matter under advisement.

The trustee corporation operates a home for the needy in the Judith Turner Memorial home, which serves as administration and central building. Use Held Charitable .

According to Allan Carson, who represented the home, the property involved in the present request was deeded on January 28, 1927, to the present owners. A trust established it as a home for the needy, and it was given the name of Judith Turner Memorial home. feature of the trust required that on January 16, in commemoration of the birthday of Judith Turner, a feast and appropriate ceremonies should be held, which were to include the reading of VanPatten Praised Judith Turner's obituary and singing of her favorite hymn. During a period when the home In Board Resolve was used by the Eugene Bible university its use for charitable purposes lapsed, and taxes were paid. It is now again used for charitable purposes, Carson declared, and his statement was borne out by testimony of Superintendent Elmer J. Gilstrap and seven persons now guests at the residence provided by the trust.
