Wheat Market Steps Forward

Revival in Europe Export Trade Revives Prices 1/2 to one Cent

CHICAGO, July 25 — (AP) — The wheat market took a step toward recovery today, deriving strength from a revival in European export trade.

Early price gains of as much as 1 1/2 cents were cut almost in half later but the market closed with net advances ranging from 1/2 to 1 cent. Corn, which started higher with wheat, slumped almost 2 cents before the finish to new lows for the past six years.

It was the first definite reversal of the recent steep wheat market decline in several sessions. Both foreign and domestic commercial and consuming interests acted to take advantage of the low level of world prices and sales of wheat to millers and exporters aggregated the best volume in some time. Early reports indicated total North American export business was around 2,000,000 bushels, half Canadian wheat and half U.S., but later messages from export interests were inclined to reduce the figures on the domestic grain and increase Canadian sales.

At the close, September and December wheat were quoted at 61 1/2- and 62 3/4- respectively. Corn closed 3/4- lower than yesterday.
