Catching Edna's bouquet of bouvardia and gardenias as she threw it from the stairway was Melva Belle Savage.

"It isn't like it used to be. Nowadays a man is known by the companies he incorporates!" And a woman by the fancy she incorporates in the jacket that accompanies her evening gown. The bolero jacket, left, which tops a white crepe dress, is striped diagonally with silver sequins. For color, a flashing scarlet belt. Sharper contrast brings us a black jacket, right, cut wide to show the deep yoke of the white dress. A padded roll trims the jacket (rimming the sleeves, too) and it ties in a knot at the waist.
