fronted, hundreds of thousands of innocent human beings who are not even remotely participating in hostilities, would lose their lives.
"I am therefore addressing this appeal to the soviet government (Finnish government in the message to Helsinki), as I have to governments which have been engaged in general hostilities publicly to affirm its determination that its armed forces shall in no event and under no circumstances, undertake the bombardment from the air of civilian populations or of unfortified cities, upon the understanding that these same rules of warfare will be scrupulously observed by all of their opponents.
"I request an immediate reply.
The message was transmitted to Lawrence A. Steinhardt, American ambassador in Moscow, and H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, American minister in Helsinki, for transmission to the Russian and Finnish governments.

Members of parliament cheered this and other statements indicating strong sympathy with Finland.
British diplomatic circles expressed interest "in the similarity of the methods applied in Finland and Poland."
The Finnish minister to London called the invasion "a straightforward case of aggression" and added that it was "obvious that Russia wanted to dominate Finland."
