

Gloves Simple Gift Solution

Many-Button Numbers Are Noted; Pigskin Still Popular Material

You can count on the fingers of both hands those of whom you owe gifts, then check off with a pair of gloves for each. For there's a style in gloves for every member of every family. You'll find that 12-button lengths, will be worn casually wrinkled at the wrist with heavily embossed gold bracelets. Six-button lengths are popular for mid-winter.

The suede finishes are smart their season. There is the true suede, doeskin, a dash finer in texture and washable, and there is mocha, a fine textured leather. Pigskin with leather trim is a popular number for driving or strictly sports wear.

Good old fabrics, how inexpensive, yet how practical for gifts that are listed for a low budget. There are fabrics in black with contrasting colors in stitching.

Fabrics with leather backs, that sport trims of leather, lacing and there are designs with gay cross-stitching on the back.

There's nothing solemn about the colors in gloves either, those tints of moss green, maroon or blue will add color to the winter costume for many a sweet young thing, her mother or her grandmother.

Placement Heads Expect Big Rush

With all signs pointing to the largest holiday business in years, increased use of the state's employment service in providing extra help for the Christmas rush is anticipated. L. C. Stoll, director, announced Saturday.

Stoll said more than 100,000 jobs had been cleared through the 21 district offices in 1939. He added that the business revival had reduced Oregon's registered unemployed from 80,000 to 30,000 in the past year, and that this might result in an acute shortage of experienced workers before the Christmas buying rush reaches its peak.

'Lemon Extract' Sold in Stores Is Tinted Water

Some Oregon housewives have been paying 25 cents for a bottle of lemon extract that is nothing but colored water with a slight odor of lemon, J. D. Patterson, chemist for the state agricultural department, announced here Saturday.

Analysis of vanilla, lemon and other extracts, gathered from all sections of the state, is now being made in the agricultural department laboratories. Patterson said all illegal extracts would be condemned and factories informed of the situation.

Salmon Moved Over big Dam

Transplanting Above New Coulee Project Is Deemed Success

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—(AP)—Charles E. Jackson, acting commissioner of fisheries, advised Secretary Ickes today the fisheries bureau had completed successfully the transplanting of thousands of Columbia river salmon prevented from reaching their old spawning grounds by the massive Coulee dam in Washington.

Jackson said the outcome of the venture may produce far-reaching effects upon the salmon industry and added detailed records of the experiment in placing the salmon in tributaries to which they are not native, may reveal undiscovered facts relating to the biology of salmon and steelhead trout.

Jackson said when the great height of Grand Coulee dam and the turbulence of the water expected below made it impossible to get the adult fish upstream and the young downstream without heavy mortality, the hitchhiking venture was decided upon. It was decided to trap the adults during their spawning migrations at Rock Island dam, near Wenatchee, and transport them to the hatchery near Leavenworth on the Wenatchee river. There eggs would be taken, fertilized and incubated to the "eyed stage" and then transported to sub-hatcheries along the Entiat, Methow and Okanogan rivers. After hatching, the fish would be planted in the streams, all of which enter the Columbia below Coulee dam. Emergency conditions were brought about by the rapid progress of the dam and as the hatcheries were not equipped to handle the run the transplanting process was used. Waters where the fish would spawn naturally were selected and the fish were placed in the Wenatchee and Entiat rivers, Nason creek and Wenatchee and Osoyoos lake. The lakes were used for blueback salmon because the young must have a lake habitat and the chinooks and steelheads were liberated in the streams.
