

Five Factors in Home Heating

Speaking before the last convention of the National Warm Air Heating and Air Conditioning association, K. C. Richmond listed five elements in the situation of each American family which decide whether or not that family's home is satisfactorily heated.

1. The way the house is built; its exposure, the amount, kind and quality of insulation, weather stripping and storm window equipment it possesses.
2. The age, character, design, correctness of installation, condition, maintenance and operation of the heating system as a whole.
3. The choice and adaptability of the equipment to house and climate and the kind and quality of fuel used.
4. The human equation; how much trouble and pains the family is willing to take to be comfortable and to operate their heating system efficiently, and their purchasing power—how much comfort they can afford.
5. Just how smart and capable the local furnace man, and the heating industry behind him, are in seeing to it that the family has a chance to buy the kind of equipment they want, should have and can afford, have it properly installed, and learn how to use it properly.

Sausages Go Into Loaf Surprise

A meat loaf that uses sausage has fine flavor.

SAUSAGE LOAF SURPRISE

4 cups bread crumbs

2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper

Salt and pepper
Mix sausage with egg and crumbs. Line a large loaf pan with sausage, reserving enough to cover the top. Combine mashed potatoes, egg yolks and seasonings. Add milk if mashed potatoes are too stiff to mix well. Fill center of loaf with the mashed potato filling and cover with sausage. Allow one-half inch or more at top of pan for expansion of meat. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for one and a half hours.
