I saw Tony Kahut work out Tuesday night in the Elks club training quarters, which happen to be about the best ever strung ap in Salem city.

I saw a very earnest young man, who went about the business of skipping rope, shadow socking and rat-a-tat-tatting a punching bag with the type of seriousness one would expect to be attendant when a fellow in the hav beging flouring up his the hay begins figuring up his income tax but hardly expects to encounter in a small town scrapper, who up to now, has been fighting for ham-'n eggs

The lithe lad from Woodburn, who makes his first main event appearance when he steps into the local armory arena against Buddy Peterson New Year's night. was so engrossed in maneuvers designed to put himself in the best possible shape that he had not the time for so much as a nod or passing remark for any one of several fellow fighters, both amateur and professional, who were also spearing the bag, or each other, with left hooks, right crosses and varlous other punches.

I had the feeling, as I watched Tony do a tango with the rope as his partner, that if ever there was a kid who start-ed up bash boulevard terribly intent upon reaching the high-est possible point in that twisting, often unsavory street, he is Kahut.

It wasn't so much the routine, which varied little from the universally accepted method used by a fighter to sharpen his ring repertoire for a coming test, but the look on Tony's face which accompanied his every move. Not a grimace nor a scowl, but a radiation of an earnestness of purpose that caused one to start feeling sorry for Buddy Peterson.

Kahut may turn out to be just another flash in the pugilistic pan, but there is no denying the shock-haired youngster has plenty of natural equipment to carry him almost as far as he wants to go on the boulevard that has made kings out of men whose names otherwise would have been known to the public only by way of birth notices, marriage license reports and obituaries.

Straight as a string, with broad shoulders that taper down into a slim waist and lean hips, Kahut is definitely put together along the wedge-shaped lines so often cited as the best for pugilistic purposes. Long, straight legs that drop from a 21 1/4 -inch thigh down to an 8 1/4-inch ankle, and arms, Winter Vacation Week even longer in comparison, that boast 13 1/2-inch bicepts and 11 1/4nch forearms.

Tony stands but five-feet-9-12,or 6932 inches, yet has a reach of 741/2 inches-five inches greater than his height.

At the top of the list of Kahut's physical equipment, however, is activities are planned for Oregon his ability to punch. He can hit with his right, can Tony, as will testify 13 of his 20 opponents to uary 6 to 13. date. He still has a habit of telegraphing his kayo clout, but no- race, a schottische dance contest, of road work yesterday morning where near to the extent he did a couples race, an obstacle race and to have looked impressive in as recently as three months ago. for comic relief and a giant slalom | eight rounds of sparring with Under the watchful eye of Man- race. ager John "Farmer" Friend, Kahut has shortened up the right and is gradually learning to pivot snowshoe expeditions. his body instead of drawing his arm back like a sling shot. A necessary piece of equipment Tony basn't so far displayed, and something owned by Peterson in an abundance, is an ability to take it. It is feared by some of the local fight filberts that Kahut may have, as it is termed in pugilistic parlance, a glass jaw.

DALLAS, Dec. 27-(Special)-Playing badly defensive ball throughout and driving well offensively throughout the second half, the Dallas Dragon hoopers handed the Salem high Vikings their first defeat of the season here tonight, by a 33 to 24 count, and evened the count with the capital city preppers. Salem won the first of the two-game series, at Salem, 42 to 39 in an overtime tussle, Big Mike Peters, burly guard, saw the Dragons take a twopoint, 15-13 halftime lead, run it up to 22-17 in the third quarter and drive down the home stretch to grab a nine-point victory. Peters hit three from the floor and one from charity channel in the drive, which, with the three points he gathered in the first half, gave him a tie with Salem's Scottie Sebern for high point honors.

Each got 10 points. Salem took the lead as the game opened, with Sebern canning a rebound, but Jackson retaliated for Dallas and Dornhecker drifted in with a lay-in to put Dallas in front. The count was tied five times and the lead changed thrice in the first half, before Jackson sank a rebound with seconds to go to break a 13-13 deadlock and put Dallas to the fore at the intermission.

The hard-checking Dallas crew held the Vikings to a total of 40 shots, the least number they've been held to this season. The Dragons got away 41, some of them cripples as the Salem defense crumbled in the second

League Schedule for Local Team Has 2 Less Tilts Than Last Year

Tillamook and McMinnville were dropped from the No-Name league when schedules were drawn up in Portland yesterday, was the word brought back here by Salem High Coach Harold Hauk, who also revealed Salem's schedule for next year will contain but nine games-two less than were played this season.

Both the Cheesemakers and Grizzlies asked to be dropped from the football schedule but wished to remain in the basketball league, Hauk reported. Sa-lem will play Tillamook next fall, as will several of the other No-Name members, but the games will not count in the standings. McMinnville and Tiliamook
