Don't Look now . . .

But . . . the flue has a gripe on everything, including social activities, which means that several promising parties had to be postponed because Papa and little Mary or somebody had the flu.

Page the Humane society . . . It's the gamble in newspaper work that thrills. In a perfectly well meant story last week we told about how youngsters should treat their new pets, a mere slip of the proof reader made it read "puppies and kitties have digestines and should be squeezed and jostled."

Five diamonds . . . at least are being sported by Salem girls since Christmas. Can't tell names, but you might look around. Sweet ices . . . were the dear little individual ices served at the Shaffer-Gillette wedding. Each had a flower of the bride's favorite blue and written there was "Margaret and Neil."

Compatibility . . . harmony reigns with the vocal trio including Elizabeth and Virginia Steed and Maxine Holt, who sang at the Rotarian luncheon on Wednesday, even though the girls attend the three rival schools, U of O, OSC and Willamette. Elegantly speaking, they sing a capella.

New citizens . . . are Thomas Charles Livesley who arrived in town on December 22 to live at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas DeBeck Livesley, and Martha Joan Minto, who will soon be calling Mr. and Mrs. John Minton, "mamma" and "daddy." Her birthday is December 23.

Stand outers . . . at the Spinsters formal were Mrs. Robert Goodfellow, in a bright red jersey formal gown. . . Maxine McKillop in a navy taffeta with pink embroidered flowers and pink jacket. . . Audrey Fehler with a hair corsage of red and white with tiny silver bells on red ribbons, and a white gown of net, beads and glistening sequins.

Comedy between acts . . . is just about as funny as on the stage. A girl across the aisle sat comfortably with her shoes off during the performance of "No Time for Comedy" and looked so comfortable it made me wish my feet hurt. On the way out a voice behind boomed, amid murmured discussions of the play, "I guess it was the cabbage salad that upset me so."

Pomp and circumstance . . . will attend a glorious contingent of the nation's best when Marion-Polk county reserve officers and their ladies gather at the Marion hotel on New Year's afternoon and then call on their commanding officers, the Spragues and the Whites. All right boys, we're already waiting at the curb for the parade, and dare we clap?
